THIS TIDAL WAVE EIGHT FEET HIGH

Fireless Earthquake Shock in City of Acapulco, Sending Numerous People to the Hills

SAN FRANCISCO, April 27.—The earthquake at Acapulco on April 15 was followed by a tidal wave eight feet high, which flooded the streets. This news was brought by the officers of the steamer San Jose, which arrived today. Nearly all structures in the town were damaged by the temblor and many adobe huts were leveled. The natives were panic stricken and their fears were so great that when an official predicted another tidal wave on the 17th the populace fled to the hills. The people did not return until the San Jose reached the port, which was on the 18th.

The shock was very severe on the Mexican coast, but its duration was not recorded.

WATER CURE FOR THREE VICIOUS DOGS

MISS IDA SIMKINS, WHO WILL PLEAD GUILTY TO SCALDING DOGS.

Woman Arrested for Cruelty to Animals Admits That She Is Guilty.

MELROSE, April 27.—Accusing the husband of the complainant against her of having used vicious language in her presence and of having insulted her, Mrs. Ida Simkins of 1440 Fifty-first avenue, charged with having thrown scalding water on three dogs, the property of Mrs. G. Alvers and Mrs. Rose, her neighbors, states that she will plead guilty, but claims that her act was justified.

Mrs. Alvers has been served with a warrant charging her with cruelty to animals by humane officer O. H. Herrold. One of the scalded canines was so badly burned that it had to be shot.

Mrs. Alvers had the following to say of the case when interviewed:

"On three different occasions those three dogs jumped upon my children and attempted to tear their clothes from off their frail bodies. Mr.

Alvers informed me last night that I was to be arrested on a charge of cruelty to animals and I asked him what the word cruelty meant and he in return swore at me and called me all kinds of names. He called me a liar and used profane language. I then slammed the door in his face and paid no more attention to him.

"It all happened under my kitchen steps when the dogs had my two little ones down on the ground tearing their clothes, and I wanted to separate them and so I threw a saucepan nearly full of water directly on top of the two dogs, which it appeared to me were doing bodily harm to the children. I did not intend to scald the dogs, but simply wanted to get them away from the children.

Dozens of times I have had to chase the dogs out of the yard. This is not

CARMEN WILL HAVE TO DECIDE QUESTION, SAY LABOR LEADERS

Union Officials Are Not to Interfere in Controversy and Platform Men Must Take Stand by May 1.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 27.—At 1 o'clock this morning the leaders of the street carmen's union declared that the men would have to determine whether or not there should be a strike on the first of May. According to President Cornelius, this determination was reached by the executive committee, because of the stories in circulation that the men were against a strike, while the officials of their organization were in favor of a walk-out.

The meeting to decide whether the men shall remain on their cars will take place on Tuesday night. The executive committee determined that it would be better for the men themselves to voice their desire to strike or accept the ultimatum of the corporation as voiced by Mr. Calhoun.

THAW'S MOTHER SURPRISES HER SON AND VISITS HIM IN CELL

NEW YORK, April 27.—"Mother, you certainly have treated me to a surprise," exclaimed Harry K. Thaw today, when Mrs. William Thaw and his sister, the Countess of Yarmouth, paid him a visit in the Tombs.

The slayer of Stanford White did not quite expect to see his mother because he had heard that she would not leave Pittsburg for two weeks.

Evelyn Nesbit Thaw was talking to her husband when his mother walked down the corridor in the Tombs. She

ACCIDENT SPOILS RACE

3 Varsity Boats Are Swamped at Once.

Most Novel Conclusion to the Aquatic Contests on Bay Waters.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 27.—Eight-oared rowing got an awful setback yesterday when the crews of the University of California, the University of Washington and Stanford University tried to row a two-mile race on Richardson's Bay.

The race did not finish, because the three boats swamped in the rough water which prevailed and the swamping of these three boats was probably as dramatic an affair as ever happened in any line of sport.

Stanford was leading by about half a length, with Washington pressing them hard. California was trailing about three lengths to the bad when the California boat sunk under the men and the Berkeley boys stopped rowing. The spectators hardly had time to say "Oh" when the Stanford boat sank, and in less than five seconds the Washington men were seen to be sitting in the water, their boat disappearing from view.

Launches and rowboats started for the crews at once. The California and Stanford crews left their boats and hung on to the sides, but the Washington men, filled with the desire of victory, tried to force their boat ahead, even when their oars were submerged up to the handles and the water was washing a foot over the gunwale of the boat.

It was, of course, a futile effort, and the crew was pulled from their boat by willing hands on launches, while others cared for the water-logged oarsmen of California and Stanford.

Washington started off in the lead, but Stanford was right with them, and the crews went to it in a fierce contest. Washington, rowing thirty-six to the minute, was holding its own well against Stanford, for whom Conant was hitting up a thirty-eight-to-the-minute clip. Half a mile had been covered and California, half frozen from the long submersion, was trailing along three lengths in the rear, when No. 5 on the Washington crew failed to get his oar out of the water, and for a dozen strokes he did not swing with his fellows. When he got his oar in order again he had only taken a few strokes when again he failed to raise the oar, and Stanford, benefiting by this, drew ahead the best part of a length. The onlookers could not understand what was the matter with the Washington No. 5.

NILES SEARLS, FORMER CHIEF JUSTICE OF THE SUPREME COURT, WHO DIED TODAY.

Former Solon and Judge, One of California's Pioneers, Passes to the Great Beyond.

Former Chief Justice of the Supreme cause of death.

Court Niles Searls, at one time one of the most eminent jurists of California, is dead at his late home, 2317 Durant avenue, Berkeley. Death came late yesterday afternoon. For a night and a day the end was prolonged by the use of strong stimulants but his physician gave no hope of prolonging life beyond a few hours and the patient gradually sank until the end came.

Last November Judge Searls, who had reached the advanced age of 82 years, suffered from a severe attack of pneumonia. He never fully recovered, his heart remaining weak from the effects of the disease. It was failure of this organ coupled with his advanced age that was the direct

MOTHER SEES HER LITTLE SON MANGLED BY WHEELS OF ENGINE

Looks Through Window of Home at Time of Accident and Witnesses Sad Spectacle.

Happening to look out of her home at 1566 Seventh street, just as the Southern Pacific train had passed, Mrs. Samuel Weiss ran shrieking out of the door to pick up the unconscious body of her crippled child, that a moment before had been playing in the street.

The mother approached the mangled child and then fainted away. The child, Louis Weiss, the eight-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Weiss, was caught by the pilot of engine No. 1903. One foot was badly mangled, while the other limb was completely severed just above the ankle. The boy was also internally injured.

Dr. W. K. Sanborn and Dr. J. M. Kane were at once called in. Anesthetics were administered and the boy rushed with all speed to Providence Hospital. It is thought that the child

Full Details of Pacific States Telephone Fight Methods.

E. T. Krause, Under Pressure, Gives State the Knowledge They Have Sought in Case.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 27.—

Admissions that directly incriminate T. V. Halsey, political lobbyist and manipulator of the Pacific States Telephone and Telegraph Company, and strengthens the evidence against Louis Glass, vice-president of the corporation, were made before the grand jury today by E. T. Krause, confidential agent for Halsey.

Under the fire of questions from Assistant District Attorney Henry, the witness declared that he was present in Halsey's office when the latter paid to the Supervisors the price of their votes for the Pacific States franchise. At the same time he declared that the campaign by which these votes were obtained was conducted at the suggestion and under the direction of one of the higher officials of the company.

"AT ANY COST."

"This affair must be carried through at any cost," was the declaration of Glass, according to Krause, referring to the defeat of the Home company application for a franchise. It was under Halsey's orders, however, that he worked, using the latter's office in the Mills building as headquarters. To this room he led the Supervisors, after he had persuaded them that it was to their interest as well as to that of the company, to have no hitch in the proceedings. Here the money was transferred.

"SAW THEM GET MONEY. I saw Halsey give the Supervisors their envelopes." That was the damage.

YOUNG GIRL HAUNTS JAIL, PLEADING TO SEE MAN ACCUSED OF ABDUCTION

Alameda Police Endeavor to Keep Louise Ralling, Thirteen Years of Age, From Breaking Into Prison in Isle City.

ALAMEDA, April 27.—Louise Ralling, 13 years of age, created a scene at the city hall this afternoon, when permission was refused her to see August Moullet, who has been charged with having kidnapped the child. When permission was refused, the girl started to weep and scream and the efforts of the police to quiet her seemed only to further aggravate her screams and tears.

Moullet was arrested two weeks ago on a felony charge but there was insufficient evidence and it was dismissed. The abduction charge was then placed against him. For two days he is alleged to have kept the child from her home. When Moullet was arrested and charged with the felony, two young men were also taken into custody and accused of having wronged the child. They are Ernest Johannsen and Joseph Pattison. Since the day of Moullet's arrest the child has haunted the police station begging the officers to allow her to see the man. She was refused and Chief Conrad and Justice Tappan gave orders that the girl not be allowed to converse with Moullet.

Early this week she was ordered sent to a home by Judge Ogden in Oakland, after her mother testified that she was unable to handle the child. The girl was brought here this afternoon, to be present at the arraignment of Moullet on the kidnapping charge. She was finally sent from the city hall by Justice Tappan, who ordered that she be kept away during the time she was not testifying. The case went over until next week.

One Month of Separation Is Too Much for Long Wedded Couple and They Remarry.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., April 27.—Divorced last month after nineteen years of wedded life, Mr. and Mrs. Charles C. Lynahan were reunited in marriage today and will start next Thursday for Los Angeles, Cal. to make their home and renew conjugal bliss. Their seventeen-year-old son will accompany them.

Mrs. Lynahan sued Lynahan for divorce on grounds of intemperance and was granted a decree by the Superior Court. "But I soon realized," she said today, "that I had been too hasty and a little cranky, which is worse than drinking once in a while, and I accepted Charlie's proposal that we call scores off and start again."

Nevada City and it was in that region that he acquired his great knowledge of mining law and mining customs. Not only as a judge did he leave the impress of his mind upon the statutes relating to miners and their peculiar interests, but as a legislator did he help to give form and direction to the necessities and desires of the people of the mountain mineral regions. The best efforts of his active and enterprising life were directed to shaping the laws that should govern the development of the mines and provide for the administration of justice among those who worked the gold yielding hills. The fact that the laws of California are models for the mining camps of the world, is voted labor bestowed upon the subject by Niles Searls.

ELECTED TO BENCH.

The first public office held by Judge Searls came to him in the early days when he was elected to the bench of the Fourteenth Judicial District. Afterward he served two terms in the State Senate, representing Nevada and Sierra counties jointly; and, later, he was appointed to the position of Chief Justice of the State Supreme Court. At the expiration of his service as Chief Justice he was appointed court commissioner which post he subsequently resigned. He was also a member of the first debris commission.

HONORED BY ORDERS.

Always prominent as a citizen, he took an active interest in the orders of which he was a member and was honored by the Masons and Knight Templars, and was chosen president, at one time, of the California Pioneer Association.

CAME TO BERKELEY.

Judge Searls took up his residence in Berkeley some years ago, it being his object to establish a place his grandchildren might call home when they were attending college; but in 1901 his wife was rendered a hopeless invalid by a stroke of paralysis, and after that unfortunate event he gave all his time and attention to the sufferer. Because of this station at the bedside of Mrs. Searls, he had of late been out of the currents of community life and had become detached from his old associations.

With his passing out goes the spirit of one of the bravest and strongest of the brave and strong men who organized and maintained for a generation, the commonwealth of California.

Woman's Mind Is Unhinged by Internal Operation and She Chokes Herself.

Suffering from the aftermath of an internal operation that, in the end, brought insanity, Mrs. Mary Wickstrom, 40 years old, of 2915 Ellis avenue, Berkeley, was taken to the Receiving Hospital yesterday afternoon and placed in the detention ward under an attendant, to restrain her from ending her life. Twice yesterday she made efforts to commit suicide. She nearly succeeded in taking her life, just before she was placed in the hospital by choking herself with her hands. It was only the quick action of her husband that prevented her rash act.

John Wickstrom swore to the complaint charging his wife with insanity and she will probably be examined tomorrow morning before Judge Harris.

The flames spread about his body, but his clothing and the gloves on his hands protected him. He was burned about the wrists where they were not protected.

The fuse blew out as the car was leaving the corner of Park street and Santa Clara avenue. There were no passengers aboard. The body of the car was enveloped in a mass of flames, but they subsided instantly. The car was taken to the barn for repairs.

I did not mean to inflict any bodily harm upon the dogs, as I am too fond of them. I own dogs myself, and there is where the trouble arose originally. My dog and those of the next door woman came together and began to fight in our back yard. They really became vicious and I feared that the lives of my dear ones were in jeopardy when surrounded by those vicious animals.

AMERICAN FARMERS TO SEEK DOLLAR WHEAT

Securing Pledges to Tie Up Surplus and Minimum Price Is Wanted by All the Farmers.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., April 27.—Dollar wheat is the slogan of the grower. Already an energetic campaign to fix that price as the minimum value of a bushel of the year 1907 crop is under way. Pledges are reaching headquarters of the American Society of Equity from every section of the wheat belt.

"We have an effective organization in each of the six States particularly interested," said J. Everett, president of the association, "and the prospect is that we will easily pledge and tie up enough wheat to compel payment of $1 a bushel on the basis of Chicago prices as soon as the crop is ready to market."

Growers signing the "dollar wheat" agreement pledge themselves neither to sell, promise to sell nor contract their crop or any part of it for less than $1 a bushel, on the basis of the Chicago market, before July 1, 1907. They also agree that one of the 1907 crop is not pledged by that time, or if the price is less than $1 per bushel at Chicago on July 1, 1907, their pledges will be binding for another three months, or until such time as one-half is pledged, or until the price reaches $1 per bushel at Chicago. But the agreement is to be null and void after September 1st, providing fulfillment of the crop has not been pledged by that time of the Chicago price has not reached $1 a bushel.

ACRES PLEDGED.

The society proposes to secure pledges of 10,000,000 acres of 12,000,000 bushels of wheat, approximately 50 per cent of the crop, as a minimum price for the year. The contract is that it must advance or cause to be advanced at least 50 per cent of the value of any wheat held in pledge should the owner need financial assistance. County boards of marketing and work in conjunction with the State and national organizations. Society officials base their estimates of the acreage and bulk needed to control the price of the crop on Department of Agriculture figures, giving the acre yield at 15 bushels to the acre.

President Everett figures that as only a portion of the crop goes into the market, only that portion needs to be marketed. He is of the opinion that the termination of a successful wheat campaign will compel growers to produce to organize with the same object. When corn growers organize, livestock feeders will naturally follow suit. This is the boldest step yet taken by the advocates of controlled marketing. They have already demonstrated the efficacy of that principle by putting a profitable premium price on cotton and tobacco. With wheat and corn under control, the principal crops of the United States will be removed from the sphere of speculative influence.

Said President Everett in discussing the nature of the campaign: "It looks chimerical, admit, to those who are not rapidly with which the idea of controlled marketing is gaining ground, but we are hearing from all parts of the country with such unanimity that success is practically assured. Wheat is the most critical of crops, and the most difficult to control. It is the most money crop with the grain grower. He usually has pressing obligations right after harvest, and in the past has had no alternative but selling in order to meet them.

"This has resulted in the dumping of millions of bushels of wheat in excess of immediate market requirements, creating an enormous surplus which became a club in the hands of speculators to beat down the price all the year round. He said: 'To the farmer who raises

The accident occurred about 7 o'clock, just as the Weiss family were about to sit down to their evening meal. The little boy happened to be playing in the street with the two Golden children, sons of A. Golden, neighbors of the Weiss family. According to the neighbors, the engineer failed to give the customary signals to warn pedestrians. No one witnessed the accident but the little companions of the injured child, and these were so terrified by the recollection of seeing their playmate mangled and bleeding that neither of them could give a coherent recital of the details.

Weiss, who is a merchant with a store near his home, accompanied the injured child to the hospital. Mrs. Weiss is prostrated and required the attendance of a physician to quiet her uncontrollable grief.

FELL TO EARTH FROM CLOUD

Parachute Jumper Has Terrible Experience During Performance.

NEWARK, April 27.—John Mack, a veteran balloonist and parachute jumper, is just recovering from his terrible drop from the clouds on Sunday. His experience has unnerved him, but he will continue his engagements.

Mack, who watched 2000 persons, who watched him drop 1400 feet at a rate almost as fast as a cannon ball travels. Only his presence of mind saved his life. Mack, before his ascension, used the usual precautions. His parachute was new and the ropes were stiff. When up 2000 feet he cut loose, and expected that the parachute would open within 100 feet. The crowd saw him come down, and expected him to be dashed to pieces. A dozen women fainted, and the horrified men turned their heads.

Mack, in desperation, swayed himself from side to side to get the thing to open. About 500 feet from the ground the parachute did open, and he stopped as quickly as if he had hit the earth.

If Mack's wrists had not been strapped to the bar he would have been dashed to pieces. As it was, his arms were nearly jerked from their sockets. He dropped gently on the Washington-avenue crosswalk and lay still until the parachute was lifted from him. He was only half-conscious then, but unhurt.

It seems that the terrific speed had caused the blood to rush to his head and he bled from the nose and ears. He says if he had hit the ground he would have known nothing of it, for he had become unconscious to pain.

AMERICAN RUSH IS DANGEROUS

Nation That Lives Too Fast to Think Is Lost, Says President King, in Naming Sins of Americans.

CHICAGO, April 27.—Shallowness, passion for material comfort and "a lackadaisical easy-going disregard of law," according to Henry Churchill King, President of Oberlin College, are the besetting sins of the American people.

President King's diagnosis of the nation's case was made last night in an address before the Oberlin Alumni Association at its annual dinner here.

"We are in real danger from the American rush," he said. "We pride ourselves on living fast, and we do. But the nation that lives too fast to think is lost."

"It is curious that in this age of science in which the reign of law is aupreme, there should be so utter a disregard for law in moral and spiritual affairs. In our reaction from Puritanism we seem to have fallen into a lackadaisical, easy-going point of view, as if, somehow or other, we expected to escape the law whenever we so desire. I tell you we are in danger of waking with ringing in our ears the awful mockery of these words, 'thou fool!' I have no doubt that the American people are wrongly interpreted when they are classed as mere money-grabbers, and yet the danger of our passing from a material to a spiritual life is the stupefying, deadening effect of our passion for material comfort, no man can deny. Our personnel and our national ideals—we had them once—are in danger."

PRESIDENTIAL PARTY GOES ON TRIP UP JAMES RIVER

Several Stops Made at Big Estates Where Roosevelt Viewed Examples of Colonial Architecture.

NORFOLK, Va., April 27.—President Roosevelt and party enjoyed an interesting trip up the historic James river today in the yacht Sylph, which he boarded last night, after the dinner given in his honor by the president of the Jamestown Exposition. The trip was purely for pleasure and was the President's own idea.

He is much interested in Colonial architecture and some of the purest examples in America are found on the estates which front the river. The Sylph got under way shortly after 8 o'clock this morning and steamed rapidly down the river. Stops were made at Brandon, the estate of the Harrisons, which possesses the finest Colonial mansion in Virginia; at Westover, the estate of the Byrds, and Shirley, the estate of the Carters. The party also visited the original site of Jamestown, on which the first English settlers built their homes. They inspected the old church tower, which is all that remains, to mark the spot.

The calls at the various estates were made in the afternoon. The President and party were accompanied by a number of the places at which they stopped a mile from telephone or telegraph communication.

The President has said good-bye to the exposition officials and will not return to Jamestown after the dinner trip. He will transfer to the Mayflower and proceed directly to Washington without a stop.

In the President's party are Mrs. Roosevelt, Miss Ethel Roosevelt, Archie and Quentin, Justice Moore of the Supreme Court of the United States, Assistant Secretary Bacon of the State Department, William L. Clegg, secretary to the President, Assistant Secretary Latta, Mrs. Ralph Cross, Johnson, Captain Lee, military aide to the President, Captain Key, naval aide to the President, Lieutenant-Commander Long and Dr. Orsborn.

Despite the overcast sky and the early morning showers there was an excellent crowd of visitors at the exposition today. The Ohio, Maryland and Connecticut buildings were formally opened by the President. The New Jersey building was to have been in the list, but its opening was postponed.

"TRUST" ADDS MORE HOUSES

Theatrical Interests in East are Merged and One Organization Will Rule.

NEW YORK, April 27.—The anticipated merger of the Shuberts and Klaw & Erlanger, the theatrical managers, came to pass today with the incorporation of the United States Amusement Company in New Jersey. By the terms of the amalgamation Klaw & Erlanger add to their interests the twenty-three theaters with which the Shuberts have heretofore fought the syndicate.

The "legitimate" and vaudeville enterprises throughout the country are equally affected by the merger. A. L. Erlanger is president of the new corporation, Lee Shubert vice-president, and Marc Klaw, treasurer. The nominal amount of capital stock issued to cover the new trust is $1,000,000 "paid in." The incorporation papers say, to cover the transfer of theaters to the Amusement Company by the parties to the contract.

ARRANGEMENTS.

Klaw & Erlanger contributes the Tremont Theater, Boston; Grand Opera House, Brooklyn; New Forrest Theater, Philadelphia, and the New York Theater here.

Just what a blow the merger strikes at the independent theatrical managers of the country is shown by the fact that Shubert Brothers were the main dependence of Belasco, Henry Miller and Mrs. Fiske in the fight they made against Klaw & Erlanger, the Frohmans and the other members of the trust.

CLEAR FIELD.
In an announcement made tonight Klaw & Erlanger declared:

"The new management will at once clear the theatrical atmosphere. There were altogether too many theaters devoted to high class attractions. While there was an enormous public to support popular priced and caudelle attractions, the higher class theaters necessarily catered to a minority. Therefore the new syndicate will see to it that more popular priced and vaudeville performances are placed upon the stages of the theaters controlled by them.

"The booking agency will be in no wise affected by the corporation. The statement concludes, 'but will remain

CADETS ARE TO DRILL AGAIN

Must Appear in Uniform on Occasion of Presentation of Medals.

BERKELEY, April 27.—Still more drilling has been prepared as a surprise for the university cadets, who thought that they were through for the year yesterday at the annual inspection and review. A notice posted late yesterday afternoon informs them that they will be expected to appear in uniform again next Monday and be reviewed by President Wheeler.

On this occasion there will be the presentation of medals to the members of the corps. Lieutenant J. M. Brown, 83, is to receive the golden token of his supremacy in rifle shooting, having made a higher number of points than any other student in the term just ending. Captain E. S. Brown, '07, won second place in the series of shots at Shennelwood, and will be presented with a silver medal by President Wheeler at the same time.

NEGRESS MASQUERADES AS MAN; IS KILLED

DANVILLE, Ind., April 27.—While masquerading in male attire Ellen Elliott, a young negro woman, was killed last night by a crowd of white boys on the public road in a negro settlement.

The woman was walking with a negro man. Words passed between the whites and the blacks and stones were thrown. The woman, it is said, drew a pistol and began firing. One of the white boys felled her to the ground with a beer bottle. She was then stoned and kicked.

FEAR OF COMPARATIVE POVERTY SAID TO HAVE CAUSED DAVID WILCOX'S SUICIDE

Ex-President of Delaware and Hudson Railway and One-Time Chief Advisor of Harriman and Ryan Is Victim of March Panic.

NEW YORK, April 27.—Fear of a life of comparative poverty because his entire fortune had been swept away by unfortunate speculation was declared today to have been the real cause of the suicide of David Wilcox, the former president of the Delaware and Hudson Railroad, and a close personal friend and adviser of E. H. Harriman and Henry H. Rogers, who shot himself in his steamship on the North German Lloyd steamship Barbarossa last Tuesday when the vessel was at sea.

Reliable information obtained today says that not only had Mr. Wilcox's entire fortune been swept away, but he faced an indebtedness of $200,000, which stands against him on the books of a prominent house in the financial district. He had practically been forced to resign the profitable Delaware and Hudson presidency a few weeks ago and had nothing left but his directorships in a number of companies, which would have yielded him a meager living.

SWEEPS AWAY WEALTH.
The clean sweep of the wealth of Mr. Wilcox took place in a few short months. At the beginning of the year he considered himself independently rich and generously signed away his interest in the half million dollar estate of his brother, Albert, who died about a year ago.

He was a firm believer in the future of Union Pacific and Southern Pacific stocks and put practically his entire fortune in margins for great blocks of both. The advance he expected did not come. Indeed, in its place was a steady decline.

He held 5,000 shares of Delaware and Hudson stock and was a member of a pool which was steadily forcing up the price. Becoming nervous over his Southern and Union Pacific holding, he threw his Delaware and Hudson stock on the market, carrying it to the lowest figure recorded last month.

EFFECTS OF MARCH PANIC.
The proceeds of this sale were added to the fortune he had already placed on the Pacific and everything was swept away in the March panic. Many of Mr. Wilcox's friends lost heavily, but with him the disaster was complete.

He was in Italy seeking to regain his health, which had gone in the nervous strain of speculation, when he was informed of the coming reorganization of Delaware and Hudson. It was intimated to him that the new management would want a practical railroad man to direct the company. He never claimed to be anything but a railroad lawyer, and, without waiting for pressure, cabled his resignation on April 8. He put it on the ground of failing health, and in accepting it the board expressed formal reluctance.

The steamship Barbarossa, bearing Mr. Wilcox's body, docked at Hoboken at 9 o'clock this morning. On Friday night a report came from quarantine that he had died from heart failure. This was corrected about midnight after Dr. Doty, the health officer of the port, had uncovered the fact of his suicide.

FRIENDS MEET CORPSE.
Three men and one woman, friends and relatives of the dead man, met the steamship at the pier and spent an hour in earnest conference with Captain Langrueter of the Barbarossa in his cabin. They refused to give even their names, and would not discuss the suicide. The captain was equally silent.

The details of the suicide, so far as known, come largely from the few passengers who learned of it.
Mr. Wilcox appeared cheerful on the first few days of the voyage, but as the steamer drew nearer New York he seemed to be depressed. On Tuesday night he took a hand in a game of bridge in the smoking-room, but retired early. On Wednesday he tried to arrange another game, but could not find sufficient players. He did not answer the steward's call the next morning. At noon, fearing that he was ill, the cabin steward unlocked the door. His dead body was lying in his berth, partially clothed. A revolver was tightly clutched in his right hand. He had shot himself through the mouth, the bullet coming out of the back of his head, where there was an ugly wound. No letter explaining his action was found. The body was secretly removed to the ship's hospital, where it was placed in a sealed coffin.

"HEART FAILURE."
When inquiries were made for Mr. Wilcox, Captain Langrueter declared that he had died of heart failure. Few of the passengers knew the truth. The captain said, in explaining his false statements, that the Barbarossa had just come through a severe storm and that he feared the news of a suicide would excite the nervous passengers.

The body was removed from the liner late in the morning by an undertaker. No definite information was to be had regarding the funeral.
Wilcox had long been a sufferer from rheumatism and gout and of late his ailments had been troubling him. He wrote from Europe that his health had not been benefited by his trip abroad and that he was in great pain. He said he intended to come home, where he could be more comfortable.

First Officer Johnsen of the Barbarossa said today that before his death Mr. Wilcox had given a steward a letter to mail for him. The steward mailed the letter Friday night when the ship reached quarantine, but did not notice to whom it was addressed. It is believed that this letter will throw some light on the suicide.

organization to keep track of racing men, and, more than this, it is a part of the National Cyclists' Association, by reason of its agreement with the International Cyclists' Union, which requires that every member shall be universal on the part of its members and allies. Our other allies, the Cyclists' Athletic Union and the Federation of American Motorcyclists, require registration, and as they recognize the National Cyclists' Association, National Cyclists' Association will be a part of it, which will become effective no May 1 next, will reach further than may appear on the surface. There is no doubt that road racing requires control, and it is our purpose to control it in the interests of clean sport and a square deal to all."

DISAPPOINTED AT CZAR'S RECEPTION

ST. PETERSBURG, April 27.—The deputation of conservative peasant members of the Lower House of Parliament, which went to Tsarskoe-Selo today, arrived in a disappointed mood at the reception by the Emperor. They were received by the Emperor, but were not accorded a special audience, but were with a delegation of military men and Constitutional Democrats, and were presented to His Majesty's court. The Emperor did not give the opportunity to deliver the local speech which he had prepared.

The Russo-Japanese negotiations are now in sight. Treaties covering the fisheries and commerce, and the traffic convention regarding the Manchurian railways are well advanced. A full agreement on all points is expected by the end of the month. The protocol of the negotiations, which has been the main point of contention, is not yet ready, but only a few minor questions remain to be settled.

WHAT IS A DEMOCRAT?
The New York World is having the trouble of its existence trying to find somebody to answer the question "What is a Democrat?" It reminds some of the toasts they heard way back in 1840. One other says a Democrat is a memory. That needs the adjective before it. And all the attempts at answers have failed to agree on any three Democrats up in the running lot of the old party who might be expected to get together and make an acceptable answer. Nobody knows what constitutes a Democrat, and there is one characteristic by which a Democrat can always be pointed out in a crowd, and that is opposition. If he sees a lamp-post standing respectably on a street corner, he opposes it. He tries to take its place on the assumption that he can light the world to better advantage with his Democratic torch.—Worcester Telegram.

LIVES LOST IN PIER COLLAPSE

Big Wave Sweeps Harbor of Baltimore As Result of Breaking of Bridge.

BALTIMORE, Md., April 27.—Panic prevailed here today when a great wave swept the harbor, following the collapse of the immigration pier of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, in course of construction at Locust Point, South Baltimore. Thirty-seven were carried down in the crash, of whom three are known to be dead, four missing and twenty-one injured.

About 500 feet of the pier, which was 1000 feet long, dropped into the water. The impact of the great mass of iron and machinery created a gigantic wave that swept through the harbor, tossing small craft ashore, smashing big steamers against wharves, tossing and rocking tugs until they became unmanageable.

Immediately following the wave there was a recession of the water in the harbor that left scores of boats high and dry in the mud.

EIGHT FEET HIGH.
At Spedding's shipyard the wave was eight feet high, and demolished a marine railway, from which two men were thrown. They were almost drowned. The big wave and its reflex led to a rumor that an earthquake had destroyed the water front. Following this rumor, a great crowd gathered at the scene. Wooden piles, supposedly sunk to bedrock, gave way and settled into the water. The outer pier was totally destroyed.

The pier settled today and engineers in charge of the work were just starting to make an investigation when the extreme end of the pier began to sink. W. N. Edson, general superintendent of the Baltimore Bridge Company, was superintending the steel construction work. He ordered all the men to leave the pier, and attempted to carry the message to the end farthest from shore himself. When the crash came he was caught in the wreckage and severely injured.

REACH SAFETY.
About twenty of the workmen succeeded in reaching a position safe from the zone of danger. Every man on the outer end went down with the wreck into deep water. Tangled up with machinery, steel beams and building material, they had little chance to escape. The wave that followed the disaster made the work of rescue more difficult, although it saved some men who were washed bodily onto boats and bulkheads. It was several hours after the accident before the timekeepers roll showing the men who went on duty today could be checked against the list of men who escaped. By that time three bodies had been taken from the twisted mass at the bottom of the harbor. Nearly all of the missing men were laborers.

Howard L. Ellender, of Baltimore, a civil engineer, was one of the dead. He lost his life trying to save the men on the outer end of the pier.

Glass mirrors were known in A. D. 23, but the art of making them was lost and not recovered until 1300 in Venice.

PROMINENT SAN JOSE WOMAN BURIED TODAY

SAN JOSE, April 27.—Funeral services of the late Mrs. Carrie Stevens Walter will be held tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock from St. Joseph's Church, this city. From 10 a. m. until 1:30 p. m. the remains may be viewed at W. L. Woodrow's undertaking parlors, 117 South First street. Requiem mass will be celebrated at St. Joseph's Church Monday morning at 8 o'clock. Interment will be at Oak Hill cemetery.

When John Burns entered the British cabinet there were rumors that he would refuse to don the cocked hat and epaulettes of official uniform. The king asked him about it. "Not true," replied Mr. Burns, "and, besides, I have already worn your majesty's uniform." The king naturally asked when that was. "When I was in Pentonville," answered Mr. Burns, alluding to his three months' sentence after the Trafalgar square riots.

NEW FEATURE AT SANTA CRUZ

Floating Palace Balboa Drops Anchor Ready to Receive Visitors.

SANTA CRUZ, April 27.—The Balboa, posing gracefully as a bird of flight now lies anchored in the placid waters of Monterey bay, about a thousand yards from shore, anchored and fastened by a strong cable. The much-talked-of floating palace poked her nose into port early this morning, safe and sound as a dollar, and of the large concourse of people on the water front to greet her arrival none was more happy than Fred Swanton, the originator of the unique craft.

The Balboa is all that was claimed, and there can be no question that it will be the most attractive and popular feature on the bay this summer. The ship is practically ready for the reception of visitors, with the exception of a few minor details and a crew of painters and carpenters are at work on the finishing touches that will put the boat in tip-top shape for the grand opening on May day night.

Aboard the Balboa, however, it's another story, as one look will convince the most skeptical. The ship, from stem to stern, is 225 feet long, the ball room on the lower deck is a dream in conception and originality, and has a floor space that measures 180 feet in length.

The upper or promenade deck is a combination of features that surely fit Manager Swanton's motto, "Everything to please, and nothing to offend." The Balboa will present a beautiful sight at night, as the vessel is to be illuminated at night by 1800 incandescent lights. A feature of the opening night will be a concert by the Third Artillery Band, U. S. A., which will be followed by a grand ball.

UNWISDOM OF CHEAPNESS.

William Barclay Parsons is a foe to scribbled work, and at a recent dinner in New York he said: "That man is most unwise who tries to get his work done cheap. Cheap work can always be secured, but the quality of such work is on its face."

Mr. Parsons, smiling, interrupted himself to tell a story. "There was a man," he said, "who entered a dairy and asked how much the milk was. 'Ten cents a quart, sir,' the young woman behind the counter answered. The man looked disappointed. 'Haven't you got any for 6 cents?' he asked. 'No,' said the young woman; 'but, she added, 'we can soon make you some.'"

SOME TRUTHS.

We hold this truth to be self-evident that all men are created equal, but in order to leave no possible room for doubt about it, we insist on the dress coat at all formal affairs. It is not true that baby-talk is a dead language. Plenty of poodle-dogs can understand no other. The world is a big mortar full of chunks of trouble, but a kind heart makes a darn good pestle. If you want to learn to be a gentleman, just buy a good dog and watch him.

KINGS MAY RULE AGAIN

Natives of Hawaii Fear the Return of Monarchical Days.

HONOLULU (T. H.), April 19.—If the municipal bill passes, it is feared that some of the lively times of the old monarchical days will return to Honolulu. Colonel Sam Parker, who is one of the best known Hawaiians, is slated for the position of mayor, at a salary of $3000 a year. It is now declared that Parker will spend all of his money giving luau and celebrations during his term of office, and the administration will be one round of jollity and feasting.

The bill was put away by the house day before yesterday, but the measure was lifted from the table yesterday and rushed through. The senate concurred in the house amendments so that the measure was sent to the governor today. It was gotten to him a day ahead of the ten days' pocket veto period, so if he does not approve the measure it will probably be passed over his head on the last day of this session of the legislature.

THOUGHTLESS YOUTH.

A high school boy who lives on Washington street provoked his best girl yesterday afternoon, and she has decided to "be mad" at him. They were walking up Broadway when he said: "George said he saw you at the skating rink last Tuesday night."

"Why, I wasn't there," she replied. "From the description he gave I thought it must have been you."

"What description did he give?"

"He said the girl was blond and little and kept falling down about every ten feet."

The trouble began right there.

CLEVELAND, April 24.—Mrs. Lydia Emmons has been crying for more than one hundred hours at the county jail, according to the statement made by the jail attendants.

Mrs. Emmons was sentenced to serve eighteen months in the penitentiary in an alleged "white slave" case. The victim was her 14-year-old niece, Rose Carter, now in the city hospital. ### AGAINST SESSION.

The opponent of an extra session of the general assembly may be divided into several classes. The anti-Folk Democrats and assistant Republicans constitute one class, louds than farmers. The public service corporations and those interested in opposing legitimate control of the rates of these corporations are another class. The brewers and their allies among the liquor interests who fear added regulation of liquor selling or more rigid enforcement of law are another class. In the fourth class are the timid, doubtful and overconservative citizens who fear disturbing the established order.

"Don't call an extra session!" This is the cry of those who fear the extra session will help Folk or hurt their business. "Don't call an extra session!" This is the cry of the timid persons. It might cost a penny or two, if it saves the people in the rates of public service corporations or if it brings about adequate liquor legislation it will be worth many thousand times its cost.

LOVES THE STAGE.

W. A. Ireland, treasurer of the Broadway Theater, Denver, received a note a day or two ago that amused him very much. It was from a well-known Capital Hill young man who wanted to know the best method of procedure necessary to get on the stage and become a member of a "troupe" of actors. At one place in the letter the young man says, "I really think I am better cut out for the stage than anything else in the world." He also states that he "loves the stage," and believes he could play a love part fine. Mr. Ireland wrote him that the only sure way to get on the stage properly is to go through the stage door.

A senator at a banquet talked so freely that he gave away secrets of import. "Dear me," he said, when reproached about it, "I always do get indiscreet after eating lobster."—From the Philadelphia Ledger.

HENRY KIRK TELLS OF NEW YORK AFFAIRS

Interesting Gossip About the Theaters and of Players in the Eastern States.

By HENRY KIRK, formerly of East Oakland.

NEW YORK, April 12.—Spring came in a few weeks ago by the calendar, and a few bright days came with the announcement. The sun looked down for a few glad hours and then went away, leaving us wind and snow and rain. The past week has been a curious mixture of good weather and the most atrocious possible. Tuesday the slush was ankle deep, making it about impossible to get anywhere on foot. It is milder now, and may continue so for the balance of the week. The country is all the promise of the spring. The grass is beginning to look up and the first sign of new leaves may be seen in the bare branches. There is somewhat of an exodus from town of people who can not stay, and from now until June there will be a continuous succession of entertainments in the Meadow Brook region, along the Hudson, at Tuxedo, and in the different residential clubs, as Ardley and Baltusort. The hunt is on in Long Island, to say nothing of the fishing and the racing in Washington.

Speaking of racing, the International Horse Show in England the first week in June is claiming the attention of many Americans. As it comes off between the Derby and the Ascot, just when London is gayest, the interest will be additional. So far the sailing lists have not contained many well-known names, but it is believed that the rush will begin during the latter part of April.

The rest of New York, the ninetieths that have never heard of Ardley and wouldn't know the difference between a sailing list and a hunting crop, is going on in the same old way. Just now there is a suspense concerning the final outcome of the Thaw case. Every one will be delighted when it is over, and then have a slight rest before the next case comes along. Aside from this, the city is singularly quiet. There are no special occasions—oh, yes, I am forgetting to mention that a former "show girl" created a sensation in Fifth avenue yesterday by driving her motor car at full speed. She did it decorously, but at the same time there was considerable commotion.

THE THEATERS.

The theaters are in the spring season with as full colors flying as possible. I should pronounce the colors a bit bedraggled. Nothing of special interest is on, and nothing new promised except Nazimova in her new piece, "Comtesse Coquette." It is by Bracco, the Italian dramatist, and has been given in Europe under the title of "Indule." Mme. Nazimova has had a most interesting career in this country. She came over with some "Russian players" and played in the Ghetto. The repertoire was of the best, but naturally did not appeal to the mass of New York theater-goers. After a while the work of the little company attracted some one's attention from "up town" and the company gave a few performances in the Carnegie Lyceum. This led to Nazimova being taken up by Henry Miller, and the actress is studying English. She made her first appearance at special matinees at the Princess in "Hedda Gabler," as you know by this time. The lady made an instilling success. Although the play was not a novelty. After this she appeared in the "Doll's House," and the transformation from the weary Hedda to the girlish Nora was almost marvelous. Mme. Nazimova possesses a great deal of personality and has considerable grasp of intelligence upon her parts and so I am expecting some fine work in her new piece.

AS TO ACTRESSES.

Speaking of actresses out of the Ghetto, recalls Mme. Kalich, who has been appearing in "The Kiss of the Sonnet." This season, Mme. Kalich is to have a new play by Percy Mackaye, who wrote "Jeanna D'Arc" for Southern and Marlowe. The name of the new play is "Sappho and Phaoon," and Mme. Kalich will be the "thuring Sappho." The play is a poetic tragedy, and while it is to preserve the ancient unities, will be essentially a modern drama. The setting promises to be especially beautiful—a single scene, the exterior of a Greek temple overlooking the Aegean sea. The production will be made at the Lyric Theater in October. One of the critics places Mr. Mackaye in the ranks of Easton and Stegman Phillips from his work in "Jeanna D'Arc." There are really some beautiful lines in the Southern-Marlowe play, and Miss Marlowe was an adorable maid. Eddie Foy has made a hit in his new piece, "The Orchid." It is a play of those English successes Americanized. This process is not always successful, as we have not yet the perfect ensemble in musical comedy like the London people, any more than we have met the finish of the Comedie Francaise. I do not suppose that we will ever have either. We are another race and a too material race to allow such millenniums to be accomplished. There is not time enough to get at the fundamental grindings of the process that must be gone through.

The Belle of Mayfair is an instance of this. It has just completed a good run at Daly's. The piece is one of the most charming things ever brought over to this country from London. It was given a rather seedy setting, and supplied with a few good principals such as Christie Macdonald, Irene Bentley, and a few others. The three people were quite lost and so it might be said that the entire reason for the thing at all was swallowed up in one or two personal hits. This seems to be the main idea in everything theatrical from tragedy down to the personal hit. I know of a really famous actress who shakes the curtain for a call, and who will not give an inch to any of her support. That is the idea and it is not to be wondered at when the populace begins to weary of the "star" as it is surely beginning to find itself.

ACTOR'S FUND.

Great preparations are being made for the Actor's Fund Fair which takes place at the Metropolitan Opera House, the week of May 6th. The main floor will be brought on a level with the stage and will be devoted to booths. The entertainment features are to be carried out in the second tier. There will be all sorts of devices for the alluring of the dollar and all the great people of the stage are interested. One of the big features will be the reproduction of the Shakespearean village. For this purpose, will be required thousands of square feet of canvas, I have heard just how many but can't remember. Carloads of lumber will be used and real trees are to be brought from somewhere in the South. Then when you consider the paint and nails and all that, why the village will cost more than $75,000. I'm sure that the original. The Actor's Fund itself, is one of the worst ideas imaginable. It is most practical, and reaches a class of people who are quite out of the range of general assistance. The home of the fund is in Staten Island, and is beautifully located among trees and country things. The house is built in the Elizabethan fashion and is most comfortable in every way as well as extremely artistic. Almost complete liberty is given to the "guests" and their every need carefully attended to. It is one of the most interesting institutions in the country and affords a grand opportunity for a practical charity may be conducted. The big fair to be held this May is partially for the benefit of this idea, but not altogether, as there is the "silent relief" which goes out to unfortunate stage people in sums of from $5 to $7 per week. This relief extends over the entire country and is not restricted to any section. The last fair was held in the Madison Square Garden about fifteen years ago and brought in about $167,000.

MME. CALVE.

Mme. Calve appeared at the Manhattan Opera House Wednesday in "La Navarraise," to a crowded house. It is not likely that the piece will find much favor with singers when the great French prima donna has given it up. It is wonderfully realistic, but never inspirational, either in its story or in its music. There is one duet, and a sort of intermezzo, that are beautiful, but that is about all. The acting of Calve is the great interest of the opera, and it is remarkable acting, greater in some ways than that of her "Santuzza." It is unfortunate that her vocal opportunities are so limited. All through the piece there is an almost ceaseless musketry fire, and it makes a lot of needless noise. The story is brief and simple. Anita (Calve), when the curtain rises, is found upon a battlefield looking eagerly for her lover, Araquil (Dalmores). She doesn't know whether he is alive or not, and she is in a horrible state of mind. I forgot to mention that the plot of the opera is in Spain and during a Carlist insurrection.

The battlefield upon which Anita is standing is in a very bad way from the terror of the combat, and there are all sorts of military reminders. After a due suspense, Araquil arrives safe and sound, and then comes the beautiful duet. Araquil's father also comes in, but will not hear of the marriage, unless Anita can provide a suitable dowry. To meet this new demand, Anita goes off and kills the Carlist general, for whose head a reward has been offered. She is successful in her gentle way, and, turning a triumph with her girdle, finds that her lover no longer believes in her. He is wounded and dying, and she falls shrieking over his body—and so ends the tale of the moral, if such there need be in opera, may be difficult to discover; at all odds it gives Mme. Calve, who is one of the papers, by the way, insist upon calling her "Mme. Calve," gives Mme. Calve a splendid chance to act, and she acts to the last line with thrilling effect. Next week is the last of the season at the Manhattan. Mme. Calve will appear in "Carmen" at the first matinee, and then the house becomes dark, and a notable year in New York operatic events will have ended.

NEWS LETTER.

The One-Year-After number of the News Letter, showing in pictures the rehabilitation of San Francisco, sold out the entire edition and it is now completely out of print. This paper sold at the regular price of 10 cents on all news stands, but great numbers were bought by scalpers and sold for 25 cents apiece. The edition was twice as large as usual, nearly 36,000 being published. The News Letter of this week is most interesting and it contains an article by H. Smith, president of the Louisville and Nashville Railroad Company, entitled "Who Is John Mitchell?" Mr. Smith handles Mitchell in a vigorous manner. "The title of this week's News Letter," says the title of an article exposing the scheme of Dr. J. Albertas of Copenhagen, in which that gentleman is reported as being desirous to exchange Albertas flat money for good United States currency, giving the following share in some far away estate in Paraguay or some other South American country. The editor scores the attempt on the part of the District Attorney's office to force the issue in that city, look in the eyes of Eastern people a great deal worse than it really is. There is also a timely article on the strikes scheduled for the 1st of May, in which counsel is given to the labor unions not to allow themselves to be governed by the politicians who do not have the real interests of the unions at heart. The remarkable fact that the Japanese show up to good advantage as compared to the white citizens of San Francisco in keeping their obligations is shown by bank records and also by the fact that as a government Japan has kept its word in the evacuation of Manchuria to the day and hour set eighteen months ago at the peace conference at Portsmouth. There is a vast amount of humor in this week's issue and a pretty little story entitled "The Lady and the Lobster." At all news stands.

WHAT SCIENCE HAS DONE FOR RELIGION

By JOSEPH E. BAKER.

A SUBTLE but mighty change has been wrought in the popular concept of the Christian religion by the spectroscopy and the study of geology. It is no longer believed that the planetary system is part of the special plan for making the earth a habitation for man. Man has learned by investigation that matter is indestructible and that the body of our planet has undergone many changes in character and form, and he has peered into space till he has discovered that the earth is only as a grain of sand on the seashore amid the multitude of worlds, suns, aerolites, comets and other bodies thronging a universe, apparently limitless, extending into distances which baffle computation and stun imagination.

Narrow unbelief and credulous ignorance combined to represent God as a mere overlord of the kingdoms of the earth and to accept primitive ideas of astronomy and material philosophy as necessary parts of divine teaching. In the illumination of a broader knowledge we know now that the Bible was never intended to be a textbook on astronomy, history and physics; that the lessons of conduct delivered by inspiration to man were entirely divested of teaching in regard to terrestrial matters. The Lord showed man how to live, the duties he owed himself and his Creator and the obligations resting upon him as a being destined to immortality and the heritage of heavens, but He left man to discover for himself the secrets of the visible order in which he was set, to assert and exert in his own way mastery over the forces which environed him, and to lift himself from companionship with the beasts of the field and walk with raised spirits among the stars. By educating himself to grasp the meaning of things and solve the mysteries of mundane life, man fitted himself for higher development and sharpened his sense to moral truth and divine precept.

Had he been given at the beginning the knowledge he has gained by experience and speculation during all the ages he has inhabited the earth, man would today be just where he started; he would not have progressed a step nor disciplined himself for the higher destiny which awaits his posterity on this globe and the souls of men when they have taken on immortality. Man began on the earth as a child, with a child's ideas of how he came to be here and the objects which surrounded him. Without a past, he built a history and traditions out of his imagination, blending the moral truth imparted to him with the simple fables invented by an untutored and childlike intellect. He believed that the earth was the center of a universe created for his especial benefit; that the sun was set in the sky to light it by day and the moon to light it by night. He imagined that God set his ancestors in an Eden where there was no sin, sorrow or death; where there was always plenty and no labor; where the fruits and flowers of all climes grew side by side; where frost never chilled and heat never oppressed; where savage beasts never entered and man neither knew nor practiced wrong.

This fabled garden from which his ancestors were expelled for eating of the fruit of a forbidden tree was the model of the Paradise that for thousands of years man pictured to himself as awaiting him in the heavens. He believed that when he had toiled and suffered through this life and died (having repented his sins) he would return to the same sort of a place in the heavens that the first human family had dwelt in on this earth.

Till four hundred years ago he believed the earth was flat, and has not yet divested himself of the superstition that earthquake, flood and tempest are not the direct manifestation of the wrath of God, to be brought on by sin and averted by prayer. He has not yet got beyond the belief that the souls return to haunt, with the animal's attachment to place, the scenes they knew in physical life. The grossest materialism colored all ideas as to the future state. People believed the earth was flat and had four corners, like a quilt or a bedspread, and that heaven was above in the clouds and hell underneath, a region of sulphurous darkness and physical torment. The life eternal was pictured as a glorified replica of what are considered joys by human society in a simple, unsophisticated state.

The doctrine of the resurrection was clouded with mysticism borrowed from the Egyptians and a form of materialism having its origin in family affection. The mother believed that in heaven she should receive back to her arms the infant she lost ere it had ceased to suckle at her breast. The dying patriarch carried to the grave the sweet delusion that he should reassemble around him in the better land his children and grandchildren, the widow rejoiced in the hope that she should rejoin her husband, and the lover cherished the belief that he should again clasp his beloved in earthly embrace. Heaven seemed very near—an attachment, as it were, to the earth, the happy home hovering above us from whence its blessed inhabitants looked down on the trials, sorrows and struggles from which death had divorced them.

So real did creations of the human imagination become that they were incorporated in the word of God, and became a part of the universal teaching imparted to man for his spiritual guidance. To dispute the mistakes in history, physics and geography made by ancient compilers of the Scripture was to blaspheme and deny the word of the Most High. It was heresy to say that the earth was round and sacrilege to assert that the sun revolved around the earth. Did not Joshua command the sun to stand still while he slew the Canaanites? Did not the walls of Jericho fall down before the blast of rams' horns? It was in the Bible and therefore must be so. The Bible spoke of the four corners of the earth, hence the earth was square. It did not occur to our ancestors that geography and physics are no part of the Christian faith, and have no connection with ethics and spiritual concepts. They overlooked the fact that the fundamental law of righteousness is embodied in the Decalogue, and that geography had nothing to do with it; that the shape of the earth was something man should find out for himself, while the duty of man to himself and his Creator was something that had to be pointed out to him.

Science has happily lifted in part the veil of error that has clouded the human understanding for ages and deluged the earth with blood. We know now that the earth, like man, must die and probably disintegrate to assume a new form; that a time will come when man will no longer cry to God from its surface or cherish the vain hope that families will reunite to dwell forever in bliss in sight of their former homes; that heaven is beyond the human conception and that immortality is not a mere transfiguration of earthly existence. As man has progressed in knowledge, he has risen in spiritual grandeur and decreased as a part of physical creation. The greater he has become in soul and comprehension the smaller he has become as a figure in the arc of the universe. His superstitions are dropping away from his benighted mind, and by learning the secrets of the heavenly bodies he has learned to lift himself out of the fabulous traditions with which his ignorant ancestors enveloped his origin. Likewise he has learned to distinguish between human misconceptions of the finite world and the mandates relating to spiritual life coming to him from the infinite.

He has taught himself to read the rocks and in doing so has trained himself to read the Scriptures in a clearer light. He has fashioned instruments that enable him to measure the distance between the stars, to chart their courses and to grasp the magnitude and glory of the myriad shapes of matter that swarm the stellar spaces, and fill the endless causeways of the upper air with light and motion. Increasing knowledge is robbing him of the delusion that he will remain but a man in the immortal state, but it is lifting him to a more majestic conception of his future and his affinity with the Eternal Presence.

Decline in Lumber Prices.

Sooner or later the project for the construction of a diversion canal on the west side of the Sacramento valley, from a point north of Colusa to tidewater at Suisun bay, will become ripe for action. It is passing through the educational stages which precede the carrying out of all great public enterprises. It took ten years of careful scientific study of the action of the Mississippi river before the construction of a levee system to control its flood waters was started, and many years more of experiment before the present condition of comparative effectiveness was attained.

It may take many years of educational work before the Federal government, the State and the landowners concerned in the central California projects will reach an agreement that their mutual interests, which are intimately blended together, demand co-operation. No great project involving an expenditure of millions of dollars was ever developed into practical shape to enable it to be carried out without long periods of delay in putting the plans formulated into execution.

Co-ordinate enterprises associated with the diversion canal scheme are the improvement of the navigable waters of the Sacramento and San Joaquin rivers for the benefit of the internal commerce of the State and the reclamation of the vast area of tule lands bordering on these streams. The latter contain the richest soil in the State, as is evidenced by those portions which have been reclaimed through private enterprise. The problem involved in the reclamation of the remainder is their protection from overflow by the floods of winter and spring, such as was experienced this year.

The purpose of the proposed diversion canal is to protect the lowlands of the central basin of the State from overflow during the flood season, by diverting a large enough volume of the flood waters of the stream above the danger point to enable the river to carry the remainder safely within its own banks to its outlet below its confluence with the San Joaquin, and to provide means for the irrigation of the parched lands of the valley on higher ground during the rainless period. The prevention of overflow will save the crops of many tons of thousands of acres of productive valley land from being drowned out at the inception of their growth. The irrigation of the higher lands with the waters carried by the diversion canal contemplates the certain maturity of crops which, under present conditions, cannot be relied upon.

The Federal government is interested in the scheme of river improvement and the reclamation of the tule lands through the benefit which the inseparable propositions of the diversion of the flood waters and the deepening of the river bed by dredging yield to navigation, and the State's interests lie in the increased revenues it will derive from some of the results secured. The only difference between the relations of the Federal government and the proposed improvement of the Sacramento and the San Joaquin rivers and the improvement and control of the waters of the Mississippi is that the former drain one State only, whereas the latter is an interstate stream. But the main principle affects the Federal government in both cases alike, as it exercises sole jurisdiction over the navigability of one as well as the other. It cannot, therefore, relieve itself of the obligation resting upon it to co-operate in any scheme of river improvement involving the reclamation of semi-arid and overflowed lands affecting the navigation of a stream.

When the Federal government assumed the task of constructing the great locks on the east bank of the Mississippi river above Baton Rouge for the diversion of the flood waters in the Plaquemine bayou, it was for the purpose of relieving New Orleans from the danger of overflow and as a measure of protection to the delta at the mouth of the river. The enterprise was in almost as broad a sense a one-State affair as the improvement of the California rivers is in the interest of the State's internal development and navigation. But no one ever questioned the wisdom of that act or the authority under which it was executed. The Federal government is, moreover, in a large sense, only on different lines, as directly interested in the various projects for the control of the navigable streams of this State and the reclamation of its tule and irrigable lands associated with them, as it is in the reclamation of the arid lands of the several western States and Territories wherein it is developing costly systems of irrigation for the benefit of arid areas partly in the public domain and partly in private ownership. There can be no inconsistency, therefore, in its sharing the conditions on the proposed public works in this State. The great central basin of California is one of the richest sections in the Union; and, while its complete reclamation and protection against the evils of those floods which periodically threaten the cultivated areas and the numerous populous communities established within it, will involve the expenditure of many millions, indirectly the nation at large will profit a thousand fold from the results of the outlay.

SPRING TIPS—HOW TO WALLPAPER YOUR HOUSE.

Control of California Streams.

The congestion of traffic on the transcontinental roads and the shortage of cars, which is interfering materially with the operations of all these lines, has produced the extraordinary result of closing the eastern markets to Pacific Coast lumbermen. This unexpected situation has also forced the lumber trust to reduce the price of its products. Lumber rates have advanced during the past twelve months to a point which was almost prohibitive. Now that the San Francisco bay cities constitute practically the only open market to the lumbermen, over-production is plainly in sight, and a slump in prices of lumber and in the freight rates of ocean carriers in the trade has followed as a measure of relief.

There is no doubt that every one interested in the lumber trade, shipowners as well as lumber dealers, took advantage of San Francisco's strenuous efforts to rehabilitate and of other bay cities to expand to accommodate their new conditions, in order to increase their own profits to an unreasonable degree. They availed themselves, moreover, of the opportunity which these conditions afforded to relieve their yards of what was before unsalable stock. In the work of rehabilitation and forced expansion, purchasers exercised no discrimination. They took everything offered in order to carry out their plans expeditiously.

The lumbermen advanced prices, however, to the limit, and it produced the inevitable result of retarding development, and thus reducing consumption. After the earlier necessities of consumers were satisfied they became more conservative and discriminating. Many building projects on both sides of the bay have been held in suspension because the prices of lumber were prohibitive and the quality dumped on the markets here inferior, as the Eastern markets would accept nothing but the selected products of the northern mills. Now that the Eastern markets are closed by traffic congestion and car shortage on the railroads, it becomes necessary to induce an increase in building activity on the shores of this bay by lowering water freights and yard prices and delivering a better quality of goods. With the reduction that has been made in both, there is still an enormous margin between the prices which exist for lumber today and those ruling thirteen months ago. The overloading of the market which is rapidly taking place will, in all probability, force larger reductions than those that have been made, and reduce the harvest which the lumber men have been reaping to more reasonable proportions.

"It is an ill wind, indeed, that brings good to no one," and while the forced reduction in lumber prices may be unwelcome to dealers and manufacturers, it will be hailed with delight by those who are contemplating costly building improvements whenever the rates for construction materials reach something like a normal condition, for they are able to see a prospect ahead of them to carry out their plans at a fair outlay. In all probability, the lowering of lumber prices will greatly stimulate building in all of the bay cities, which is much to be desired.

John D. Rockefeller has made another gift of $6,000,000 to the University of Chicago. Is it to be followed by an advance in the price of oil, as has usually occurred when former gifts were made, is the question which most deeply interests the public generally.

TORPEDO BOAT BIDS TO OPEN

Exhaustive Tests of Destroyers
Metcalf.

WASHINGTON, April 27.—Bids will be opened at the Navy Department next Tuesday for the construction of $3,000,000 worth of submarine torpedo boats authorized by the naval appropriation bill at the recent session of Congress. As the law requires that the boats must be of American design and patent, the department does not anticipate that there will be more than two bidders, the Electric Boat Company of New York and the Lake Torpedo Boat Company of Bridgeport. It is possible, however, that the Sub-Surface Boat Company of New York may submit a bid, although the company had not constructed any boats.

EXHAUSTIVE TESTS.

The act making the appropriation for the boats to be purchased contains a provision for exhaustive tests to determine the merits and capabilities of such vessels, and furthermore that no submarine shall be bought until it is demonstrated in the opinion of the Secretary of the Navy that they are the equal of the boats of the class now in the navy and under contract for the navy. On the day that the bids are opened a series of tests and experiments will be begun in Narragansett Bay, off Newport, under the direction of a special board appointed by the Secretary of the Navy and of which Captain Adolph Marx is president. To this board Secretary Metcalf has delegated the authority to say what type of boats meet the requirements of the law, and upon the board's report will depend the award to be made for the construction of $3,000,000 of submarines.

MOST IMPROVED TYPE.

The two boats entered in the competition are the Octopus and the Lake, and they have already undergone their preliminary inspection by members of the submarine board. The Octopus is the larger, and it is claimed the most improved type of submarine ever constructed in this country. She was built at the Fore River yards under contract with the Navy Department, and will be ready to turn over to the navy upon the completion of the Newport tests. She is of the same general type as the submarines now in the navy and built under the same patents as the submarines being constructed by the British Admiralty. She is approximately 100 feet long, 12 feet beam and has a displacement of 550 tons, carries four torpedoes and has a radius of action of 1000 yards. At her recent builders' trials, she exceeded her contract speed by more than one knot, both on the surface and submerged, and it is expected that the tests she will make nearly twelve knots on the surface and two knots less submerged. Her complement is fifteen men. She is equipped with a periscope, which when projected above the surface, enables the operator of the boat when beneath the water to command a view of thirty degrees of the horizon. In the endurance tests it will be necessary to keep the boat submerged for twenty-four hours, and during that time the mess will be cooked on electric stoves.

ON DIFFERENT PLAN.

The Lake is slightly smaller in size and displacement than the Octopus and built upon a radically different plan. She is constructed on what is known as the even keel system and sinks rather than dives, as does her competitor, a feat which it is claimed gives her stability but less speed in descending and ascending. The Octopus dives under her own motive power. One of the features of the Lake is a diving compartment from which a door is opened and a diver sent out to the boat. Some advantage is claimed for this contrivance, but its practicability has never been demonstrated owing to the impossibility of seeing under water.

Great reliance is being maintained by the Navy Department in regard to the tests, as it is claimed that representatives of foreign navies have been extremely anxious to learn secrets of the submarine plans of the United States navy.

HAS EASTERN HEN ECLIPSED

Hingham Big Egg Producer Beaten by Fowl Owned by Dr. Schwaner.

Editor TRIBUNE:—On the third page, third column of THE TRIBUNE of April 10, the following item was printed:

A light Brahman pullet owned by George L. Fish, of Hingham, has brought distinction of her breed and fame to that town by presenting her owner with an Easter offering of most unusual size. It is an egg laid on March 12, which Mr. Fish and his neighbors believe to be the largest ever laid by a hen.

The egg measures nine and three-eighths inches lengthwise and seven and one-fourth inches the other way and weighs six and one-fourth ounces. Mrs. Brahman's product is one and three-eighths inches longer than an ordinary egg.

A peculiar feature of the big egg is that there is every reason to believe that instead of being a "double yolk," there is another hard shell inside of this one. It is impossible to determine this by the usual test of holding it up to a strong light, as the shell is unusually thick. By turning it carefully, however, there is a perceptible "hard" that can be felt and heard.

A few weeks ago a story was sent out from some place in Connecticut telling of a hen that had laid a "monster" egg that measured seven and three-eighths inches around the long way and weighed four and three-eighths ounces. The story ended with a challenge to the world to produce its equal. Mr. Fish is not looking for championship honors, but he declares that his exhibit makes the Connecticut hen look like a nutmeg.—Boston Globe.

Do you for a minute think, taking size into consideration—I mean size of the breed of hen—that Alameda County, and especially Oakland, hens will allow any New England hen to produce her fruit that is ahead of theirs. Not much. Dr. W. R. Schwaner, of this city, a reputable citizen, has a white Leghorn hen that annually—mark that annually—lays an extraordinary large egg and not satisfied with that, encloses another egg inside the big one. She did that last year and again this year. It is her Easter offering to Dr. Schwaner's family and to prove that there is another egg inside the big one the white and yolk of the large one has been removed and the egg or rather eggs are on exhibition in the rooms of the Chamber of Commerce.

Mrs. Leghorn is much smaller in stature than Mrs. Brahman, but she has done herself proud in laying an egg which measures 8 1/4 inches by 7 1/4 inches and in addition another perfectly formed egg inside that one.

Would suggest that you get busy with another hen fruit story and let the hens of Alameda County read it, and then see what they will send into the exhibit at the Chamber of Commerce. They do not simply make the statement that they do so and so, but actually deliver the goods and allow all visitors to see for themselves. Really, John, you'll have to get a better hen story than the above to beat an Alameda hen. Why not tackle a good rooster story next? There are a lot of pretty good roosters in Oakland and in fact all through the county.

Very truly yours,
NED STEARNS,
Secretary Chamber of Commerce.

DOG WORSHIP IS NO MYTH

Women Arraigned for Lavish Affection on Their Canine Pets.

BY LADY VIOLET GREVILLE.

LONDON, April 27.—The dog worship condemned by Father Vaughan is, alas! no myth. We all of us know the woman—no longer the lonely old maid, credited with an inordinate love for dogs, cats, and parrots—but the young beautiful mother of children, who offers lavish worship at the shrine of her canine pets, who hires trained nurses for them, kisses and pets them enthusiastically, gives them the softest cushions to lie on, the best morsels of fish and chicken to tempt their pampered appetites, who makes herself a slave to their whims and fancies, and spends pounds in gold and silver dog-collars, fur coats, and embroidered wraps. These only bore and trouble the little creatures, who are far happier living according to nature. Such exhibitions are loathsome to right-minded people, who love their dogs adequately and respect them rightly. A dog in shoes and coat, with a pocket-handkerchief and goggles, knows and feels that he is ridiculous, and resents it accordingly. He would far rather be joyfully hunting a bunny in the shrubbery, to return to his master happy, dusty, with scrunched tongue hanging out of his mouth and tail cheerfully wagging. The silly woman seeks to thwart nature, but nature invariably revenges herself.

the course which was a help to the sprinters but was unfavorable for good time in the relays. The track was in perfect condition.

Nearly 10,000 persons were present when the first events, those of the Philadelphia Grammar School team were run off.

Hubbard and Shaw, of Dartmouth; McCullough, of Pennsylvania, and Tallcott, of Cornell, qualified for the final in the 120-yard hurdle.

WARDEN JAMES PAGE LOSES A BROTHER

Warden James M. Page of the Receiving Hospital received the sad news yesterday of the death of his oldest brother, Frank M. Page, a rancher of Platt county, Missouri. The message did not come direct from his old home at the time of his brother's demise, but in a letter from his youngest sister, who mentioned what a sad occurrence had befallen their brother. From the wording of the letter it was supposed by the sister that her Oakland brother had been duly informed of the death in the family. Warden Page is greatly grieved over the message he received and he thinks that it is probable that a mistake was made possibly through transmission of the telegram that must have been sent.

Frank Page had never visited his brother in Oakland. At the time of his death he was 68 years old and left a wife and grown children. His wife at the time of his death had been a bride of only several months, his former wife having died two years before.

PROTEST AGAINST PROPOSED RULE

ALAMEDA, April 27.—Property owners on Park avenue near the bay have protested to the council at the erection of a planing mill by Charles McRae. The city ordinance prohibits the building of mills south of Clement crane and McRae's mill is within the forbidden territory. McRae is to appear at a meeting of the council Friday night to make explanations.

JUMPS FROM MOVING CAR

Excited Millhand Fails to Heed
Conductor's Warning and Is Injured.

Because he did not listen to the conductor's warning, "Wait until the car stops," O. Masuret, a mill hand living at 618 Eighth street, was thrown to the street when he sprang from a moving car at Twelfth and Webster streets yesterday afternoon and sustained bruises about the right hip. Masuret went to the Receiving Hospital, where he was treated by Warden James Page. He says he was in a hurry to get off the car and did not want to wait until it came to a standstill.

FINGERS CRUSHED IN HANDLING HOT IRON

John Poole, a machinist, residing at 1219 Eighteenth street, sustained a painful injury yesterday afternoon while at work in the United Iron Works, by having the first two fingers of his left hand nipped between two pieces of iron. The end of the index finger was nearly severed, while the second finger was bruised and crushed. Poole went to the Receiving Hospital for treatment, which was administered by Dr. Koford.

WAGON PASSES OVER DRIVER

Contractor Is Victim of Run-
to Use Bridle.

K. Johnson, driver for Walker & Son, contractors, and living at 1920 Chestnut street, was seriously injured last night in a runaway. At 5 o'clock he entered a store at the corner of Fifty-third and Grove streets and on returning started to drive off without replacing the bridle he had taken from his horse.

This resulted in a runaway, in which Johnson was thrown out of his rig. He sustained a broken rib when the wagon passed over his body, and was otherwise bruised. He was taken to his home in the patrol wagon.

SHOVES ARM THROUGH PANE

Painter Spars With Friend and
Window.

By scuffling with a friend in a light sparring match yesterday afternoon, James Pelettiari, a painter living at 213 Fourth street, West Berkeley, sustained a cut on the right arm that will cause him to retire from active work for the next few weeks.

When he sidestepped his friend he did not notice the window directly back of him until he fell through the pane. The right arm was cut for two inches just above the wrist and the painter had to have the gash stitched at the Receiving Hospital by Warden Page.

THE KNAVE

Some Interesting
Lillian Russell

SAN FRANCISCO, April 27.—The efforts of former District Attorney Byington and his colleagues to re-establish or rather rehabilitate the ruins of the Democracy wrought by whispering Gavin McNab will, I think, prove futile. The men who used to vote the Democratic ticket in the old days have changed. They will no longer vote for a corporation's tool or any old thing just because he has the approval stamp of a Democratic convention all over him. They are tired of being sold and resold. In the future they are going to vote for their best interests. In consequence they will naturally line up with the Independence Leaguers.

Now, while I like Byington personally, I cannot stand for him as a political leader for a minute. In the first place he has never stood by his friends. He has always been a trimmer. When he was District Attorney during the regime of the Andrews Grand Jury no one knew where he stood. One day he was for McNab and Dr. Washington Dodge and the next he was for the opposition.

Then again, he is listed as a mutt since Frank Heney and Bill Laugdon have secured indictments on practically the same evidence that was in the possession of Byington when he was supposed to be after the grafters. With that evidence Byington threw up his hands and declared there was not sufficient grounds to indict. In the light of recent developments the attitude of Byington is a joke.

Three years ago Byington was the self-styled prosecutor of the grafters. Today he is defending Chief of Police Dinan, who is under indictment for perjury. Then he was trying to send Wittman to jail. Now he is trying to save Dinan from State's prison. With these few facts in mind it is hard to think of Byington in any light other than a trick tumbler. Really, he ought to be with a first-class circus.

As an acrobat your way lies, Mr. Byington. You who were ready to denounce Gavin McNab and when you felt you needed him you were first to kneel before him and beg for favors. You knocked with your left and gave the glad with your right hand. Had you stayed with your natural friends (the legitimate enemies of McNab) you would still be in office. But you preferred to carry water on both shoulders. Now, you probably realize that in the long run it is a good thing to stay by your friends and quit the double-cross business. It's better to be a bum in office than a bum out of office. Take that tip from me.

The exposure of the fiendish plot to spirit away and possibly murder P. H. McCarthy, head of the Building Trades Council, is one of the most sensational features developed in the struggle between capital and labor since industrial warfare has existed on the Coast. McCarty's contention that the scheme to imprison and kill him originated in the brain of Herbert, alias "Yeppe," George, head of the Citizens' Alliance, is one of the most dramatic phases of the case. Since his advent in California George has made such an ass of himself that the people identified with organized labor and many of the sane merchants and officials of the Citizens' Alliance believe him capable of anything looney. The outrageous manner in which he exposed himself when he told how no woman in the city could resist his charms was the most humiliating knock handed the Alliance. But whether George had or had not a hand in the plot to remove McCarthy from his field of usefulness is of little concern to me. To my way of thinking the extremes to which desperate men will go to make a handful of tainted money or avenge real or imaginary wrongs is the meat of the problem under consideration. No one for a moment thinks that Electrical Workers' Union No. 6 as a union was a party to the plan to send McCarthy to Davy Jones. But unfortunately the men accused of being implicated in the proposed kidnaping and murder are identified with the organization. If they are proven guilty and the real facts are given to the people you can bet your new hat that people not identified with labor unions will be implicated in the scheme. It will be found that men interested in the overthrow of organized labor conceived and financially assisted in the movement to kill McCarthy. The latter points to Herbert George, head of the Citizens' Alliance, as the one enemy of labor most anxious for his destruction. The political effect of this exposure is limitless. If the workingmen are only half-way convinced that the employers are concerned. They think that if Schmitz or whoever their candidates the candidates of the labor party at the next election will be elected one and all. And that goes if Schmitz heads the ticket even with an indictment against him.

While some of the labor leaders are not favorably disposed toward Schmitz, they are unanimous in their belief that he is the best Mayor the town has had so far as the interests of the laborer are concerned. They think that if Schmitz or whoever their candidate may be is defeated, the death knell of unionism will be rung. And so long as they are in that mood it is safe to say that the workingmen will vote as a unit next November. Their candidate will either be Schmitz or P. H. McCarthy, unless the cards are shifted.

I'm going to tell you something about Lillian Russell. You should know a few things relating to the strange beauty of this most charming of women.

What does she eat?

Well, she eats just plain, ordinary grub. A bit of stew or plain beef, oysters or any other old thing.

And she drinks good old beer.

And she's a grandmother with a divorced daughter.

Now, ladies, does that satisfy you?

Also, Lillian of the airy fairy figure and bewitching personality hates women. She will not see a female reporter from a newspaper. And because why? Just for the reason that when the women connected with newspapers call upon her they always slobber over her and ask what she uses to make her look young. Then she declares they kiss her and hug her and protest their admiration and affection. But when they begin to write the account of their meeting with her they always rap her. As a rule they seek to impress upon their readers that she is a grandmother and that her beauty is purely chemical.

Hence her contempt for the literary of her sex.

You folks across the bay appear to be overlooking the fact that a former Oakland girl has become one of the social queens of Europe. I refer to Mrs. Charlemagne Tower, wife of the American Ambassador to Germany. Mrs. Tower was Helen Smith when she lived in Oakland. Her father was G. Frank Smith, a noted lawyer in his day, who figured prominently in the suit Mrs. D. D. Colton brought against Stanford and the magnates associated with him in the Southern and Central Pacific.

The family used to live on Castro, near Eighth, in a big wooden house with a mansard roof. It was quite a pretentious mansion in its day and the scene of much open-handed hospitality, but the last time I saw the old place it was about the shabbiest reminder of departed grandeur I ever saw. The fine lawn was a tangle of weeds, and a lot of hand-me-down female undergarments ornamented a clothes line stretched over the weed-choked remains of once beautiful flower beds.

Frank Smith ruined himself by financing Mrs. Colton's fight against the Espee Big Four, who never forgave him for the trouble, notoriety and expense he gave them. Not many years after that case was tried Smith went back East and died.

Charlemagne Tower is an enormous rich Philadelphian with considerable aptitude for literature and a taste for the frills of diplomatic life. He leased a famous old palace in Berlin, which he refurnished and remodeled at a cost of $1,000,000, and set up an establishment that eclipsed in splendor all the other embassies in the German capital. His salary is $17,500 a year, but he spends a quarter of a million a year, and his entertainments are magnificent occasions. Tower is the first American Ambassador that the Kaiser has allowed to entertain him personally. Mrs. Tower presides over the splendid establishment of her husband with grace and tact. She is very popular with the diplomatic corps and the members of the Kaiser's entourage.

While on the subject of Oakland folks, I may as well tell the story of Mrs. Bob Miller's Paris bonnet. Mrs. Miller is the wife of the manager of the Owl Drug Company and is able to indulge in expensive tastes to her heart's content.

Not long ago she had shipped out from Paris a dream of a hat, the very latest thing in French millinery, with which she intended to dazzle society during the post-Lenten season.

She desired to make some trifling change in the trimming, alter a bow or something, and took the delicious concoction of Parisian art to one of Oakland's most fashionable modistes to have the alteration made. When she called for it, the hat was nowhere to be found. It had mysteriously disappeared while in Madame X's custody, and the only explanation Mrs. Miller could get was that one of the girls had probably sold it by mistake to another customer. As the hat was a very expensive bit of toggery with a coquettish charm all its own, Mrs. Miller is unable to understand how one of the girls could hand it out by mistake for the ordinary feminine headgear carried in an Oakland millinery store.

She is still wondering who got her imported Paris hat.

Phil Crimmins is getting himself disliked by attempting to frame up a machine to do Republican politics in the coming municipal campaign. The "organization" has an idea that Crimmins is taking too much on himself and is trying to butt in on the prerogatives of his betters. He has not even asked permission to go ahead nor come around with a tender of allegiance in case he takes a few tricks. This is rank heresy in the eyes of the inner circle.

The organization leaders do not think the time is ripe for doing politics. The political weather is very thick, and the steerage way far from clear. There is nobody in sight to put up as a rallying center, and the graft investigation has produced such a condition that a drum beat at this time for partizan organization promises more perils and perplexities than honors and victories. Hence masterly inaction is regarded as the wisest policy for the present.

But Phil Crimmins has concluded that this policy is not best for his interests whatever it may be for the interests of others. So he is working up the nucleus of an organization that will give him a pull in the next Republican convention. He and Martin Kelly once ran the town, and he sees no reason why he should not run it again, or at least be a full partner in the administration. But the organization leaders are viewing his efforts with a cold eye of disapproval. The displeasure is all the more marked because he has refused to take orders to desist from staff officers of the inner circle.

It is beginning to be whispered around that the Relief Corporation is going to have a tight squeeze in making both ends meet. It will surprise many to learn that some 16,000 people are living in shacks erected by the Relief Corporation, but such is the fact. A majority of these refugees are chronic bums; many of them were not burned out at all, and some were not even in the city when it was destroyed. Yet more than a year after the great calamity the Relief Corporation has an army of people on its hands in hovels in the parks and public squares, getting drunk and fighting, demanding relief and refusing to work. The parks and squares must be vacated by August 1st and the corporation does not know what it is going to then do with its choice collection of vagrants. Something must be done to set them on their feet, it is asserted, but as they have refused to try to get on their feet or stand when set on them, the job of tiding them over is not an easy one.

The relief fund is running low, which accounts for the anxiety to wind up the relief work.

Only $530,154.89 in cash remains in the hands of the corporation, but it has assets computed to be worth $1,405,554.76. In addition there are subscriptions accounted for but not turned in to the amount of $1,458,697.03, of which $73,142.27 is set down as doubtful. This looks like enough to finish up the work of the relief, but a premonitory whine has been let out that there is danger of a shortage before the business is closed. The problem appears to be to spend every dollar of the money without contracting any liability that the corporation will have to meet.

Up to March 16th, the subscriptions actually received aggregated the enormous total of $7,989,337.02, of which $7,439,182.13 had been expended. The gross total of all subscriptions to the relief fund is $9,181,403.23, but nearly a million and a half has not yet been paid in. This vast sum does not include the $2,500,000 voted by Congress and expended in military and Red Cross channels or the large amounts sent by fraternal organizations to assist their stricken brethren in San Francisco. Neither does it include considerable amounts contributed by religious organizations in the East to aid in rebuilding the churches destroyed in the fire. It is exclusive also of $60,000 distributed personally by the representative of the Governor of Oregon to citizens of the Webfoot State who suffered in the fire.

Much personal relief was extended individually through agents by wealthy Californians in the East or by relatives of persons burned out in the fire. John Hays Hammond sent out money to half a dozen men here to be distributed to people in need, but of a class that would starve before they would apply to a public committee. He gave away over $50,000 in this way. Charles G. Yale distributed several thousand dollars of his money helping people who needed a lift to start again, but had no hankering after a term of free feeding.

If the Relief Corporation had $10,000,000 in sight it would probably go on relieving after a fashion that fosters vagrant camps and creates tramps and loafers for the next two years, but as the funds are running low it is compelled to wind up its affairs and go out of business very soon.

STEEL TRUST TO ELECT HEAD

Election Will Determine the Status of Corey With Directors.

NEW YORK, April 27.—The number of shares of stocks sold today was 157,367; a year ago 1,034,800. The par value of bonds sold today was $503,000; a year ago today $1,759,000.

On Tuesday next the directors of the steel trust will meet to elect a president of the great corporation. Since the last election of a president of the steel trust things have been happening that make the election of almost sensational importance. Every schoolboy and schoolgirl in America, not to speak of every adult, understands thoroughly well the question at issue. This election will be in the nature of a verdict.

The whole world has heard the testimony and the issue cannot be dodged. The evidence is all in. George Westinghouse, who was quoted several days ago to the effect that the copper metal market is strong and will not decline, is now quoted as believing that it will decline two or three cents a pound.

Owing to the boom in real estate the Canadian Pacific Railroad has advanced the price of its farm lands to $10 an acre. Its holdings of land at Vancouver are now valued at $3,000,000 more than when the title was taken on them.

WAS GOOD CURE.
"You certainly look better; you must have followed my advice and had a change."
"Yes, doctor, so I have."
"Where did you go?"
"I went to another physician."
Chicago Journal.

HE WHO LAUGHS.
Several good fellows, among them being a mining promoter and an advance man and press agent for a theatrical company, were in a cafe yesterday talking over the "game" of the day.
"Say," said the press agent, "I heard a great description of a mine the other day."
"What was it?" asked a real estate broker.
"It was this," replied the press agent. "A mine, is a hole in the ground owned by a man."
Everybody laughed and the mining promoter and the drinks were on him. He ordered, and, after taking a couple of punts at his cigar said:
"I heard a description of a theatrical company, recently, that I thought was pretty good."
"What was it?" asked the real estate man.
"It was this," replied the mining man. "A theatrical company is an organization of stage people about a week behind an awful liar."
The press agent bought the drinks.

ORGAN TONES PROVE FATAL

Cathedral Instrument Causes Panic and Women Are Trampled to Death.

PALERMO, Sicily, April 27.—During a panic in the Cathedral today two women were trampled to death. The people have been worked to a great pitch of excitement by frequent drunken shocks and when the deep bass tone of the organ of the Cathedral rumbled forth it was thought to be another earthquake and a wild rush was made for the doors. Besides the two women killed over 100 others were seriously injured.

BANDIT RAISULI IS WORKING UP PEOPLE

TANGIER, Morocco, April 27.—The natives have been worked up to a great state of excitement by the bandit, Raisuli, and his ally Buhazara, who have been sent among the people to say that the Sultan sold Oudjida to the French and that is why French troops are now in possession of the town. An outbreak may occur at any hour as many sections are on the verge of rebellion.

WEBSTER'S SONS.
Speaking of Daniel Webster, isn't it a strange fact that his two sons, Edward and Fletcher, should have died in the Mexican and Civil Wars? Daniel Webster played fast and loose with the very question during his entire political career. The Mexican War, which is now conceded to have been for the extension of slave territory, claimed one son, the Civil War, which led to the abolition of slavery, claimed the other. Fletcher Webster was killed at the second Bull Run battle, about ten years after his father's death.—Julius Chambers in the Brooklyn Eagle.

"NAZARETH" IS TO BE REVIVED

Santa Clara College Students Now Rehearsing Passion Play.

SANTA CLARA, April 27.—The approaching revival of "Nazareth," the famous passion play at Santa Clara promises to eclipse all former productions of the sacred drama, and judging from the enormous advance orders for seats both by letter and telegraph, the greatest attendance in the history of the play can be expected. It is now seven years since the original production of the passion play was made at Santa Clara college, and since that time it was revived once, four years ago, when it broke all records.

Five performances were given on that occasion and at every one of these hundreds of people were turned away. In order to meet the demand for seats for the coming production the faculty of the college will add one extra performance, on Saturday evening, May 18th, making a total of six. The dates are as follows: Monday evening, May 13th; Tuesday afternoon, May 14th; Saturday afternoon, May 18th and Saturday evening, May 18th. With the exception of Monday evening's performance which is the Santa Clara valley night, special trains will be run to all of the performances from San Francisco, Oakland and all intermediate points. Information can be obtained from all local railroad agents.

Following is the scale of prices for all of the performances: Box seats, $1 $2.50, $2, $1.50 and $1, general admission 50 cents. Seats will be on sale on Monday, April 29th and every day thereafter at Kohler & Chase's music store, Sutter and Franklin streets.

Rehearsals are held in the college in the big theater every evening under the direction of Martin V. Merle, A. M. '06, who staged the famous sacred masterpiece upon the occasion of its previous revival four years ago. Mr. Merle is the author of "The Light Eternal," the successful religious drama, is at present in the height of a very successful career in the East, where it is being produced under the direction and management of Henry Miller. Mr. Merle left the production to come out West to take up the direction of the passion play at his alma mater.

YOUNG GIRL DISAPPEARS

SAN FRANCISCO, April 27.—Last Thursday morning, about 10 o'clock, 15-year-old Carrie Goyette was left by her sister, Mrs. Harper, in charge of Mrs. Zappa's baby, on the sidewalk in front of the Goyette home, 510 1-2 Lynden avenue. An hour later, when the baby's mother returned the little one was playing alone. In that brief time Carrie Goyette had disappeared and the girl's distracted relatives have failed thus far to find any trace whatever of her.

"Carrie has been attending the Moulder school, at Gough and Fagans streets, and everyone there knows her for what she is—a quiet, diffident child," said Israel Goyette yesterday. Never before has she been away from home for even half a day. In the light of what has happened to other young girls in San Francisco, we are terribly anxious. We fear she has been kidnapped.

HIGHEST MOUNTAIN PEAK.

Death Valley which is famous for many things besides its name has long been heralded as containing the lowest spot of dry land in the United States. The United States geological survey has just been computing its depth accurately by means of a spirit level and the results show that until the Salton Sink was turned into the Salton sea by the overflow of the Colorado river Death Valley was not entitled to the distinction. Its lowest point is 276 feet below sea level, while the Salton Sink had one spot 287 feet below. The final computations have not been made but the error in the case of the Death Valley measurement will not be over three feet at the outside.

It is an interesting fact that within seventy-five miles of this extreme low land there is to be found the highest point in the United States. That is the tip of Mt. Whitney which is a foot or two over 14,000 feet above sea level. Both are in the southern part of California. The United States has from many points of view been called a land in which extremes meet but this physical peculiarity will give it a better title to the phrase than it ever had before. Southern California may boast not only of the extreme high and the extreme low, but also of the extreme of fertility and the extreme of desert, the extreme of real estate boom and the extreme of acrimony on the part of both residents and tourists alike and last but not least of the extreme in the way of "fish" stories about fruit. San Francisco, which has nothing but extremes of earthquake violence and civic corruption is hardly in the running.—From the Chicago Record-Herald.

DRANK THE LISBETTO

A student of human nature who is also a lover of music and has been attending all the performances of the grand opera, had been getting considerable entertainment out of the audience, says the Philadelphia Record. The other evening he saw a fashionable, able looking woman accompanied by a man who might have been her country cousin and as he sat very close to them he heard some of their conversation. When the curtain fell at the end of the first act the woman turned to her companion and said:

"Wouldn't you have time to go out and get a libretto?"

SUGGUMBS FAR FROM HIS HOME

LAWRENCE J. CATTELL.

Lawrence J. Cattell Dies in New York as Result of Serious Operation.

Friends of Lawrence J. Cattell will grieve to hear of the untimely death of the young man on April 24 in New York City.

Lawrence Cattell who is the only son of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Cattell, old residents of this city, and brother of Mrs. J. C. Roban, was born in Oakland twenty-nine years ago. At the age of fourteen he went into the employ of the Wells-Fargo Express Company as office boy.

By dint of hard work he gradually worked himself up to the position of assistant auditor of the company. Up to three years ago Mr. Cattell was working in San Francisco, where the Wells-Fargo Company main office was at that time situated, but upon the removal of the main office from San Francisco to New York he was also stationed in the eastern metropolis.

Death was caused by the effects of an operation, which he underwent for appendicitis, but owing to his weakened condition could not withstand the grim reaper. The remains will be sent to this city for burial.

FIXES TEETH OF A SULTAN

American Is Dentist to Ruler of Morocco and the Harem.

COSHOCTON, O. April 27.—Dr. Frank Bostwick of this city now located at Gibraltar, has become a dentist to the Sultan of Morocco. The work upon the royal molars will probably consume a long time as Bostwick is allowed to work upon them only one hour each day. The Sultan endures pain well and has grown so fond of the American that he meets him each morning in the hall of the palace and when particularly pleased slaps him on the back. After the day's work is finished his majesty and the dentist engage in a game of billiards. Expressive of the trust he has in Bostwick the Sultan has also made arrangements to have him examine the teeth of the members of his harem. The admission of an outsider to this place on such an errand is without precedent.

SURGEONS HAVE MANY PERILS IN THEIR WORK

Poisoned wounds are an ever-present source of trouble to the medical profession, but they are rarely dangerous to those who are not overworked or depressed by some constitutional disturbance. Modern habits of more numerous holidays and greater exercise in the open air have reduced such wounds very greatly for they were certainly much more frequent at a time when members of the profession frequented bars and billiard rooms and when all the wounds they dressed were suppurating.—Hospital.

NOT WHOLLY COMPLIMENTARY.

(From the New Bedford Standard.)
The eighty Republican members of the Massachusetts Legislature who have answered yes to the question "Ought Roosevelt to be the Republican presidential candidate in 1908?" must have a poor idea of the president's own valuation of his promise. Mr. Roosevelt has said definitely that he will not be a candidate. He said so under circumstances which made the remark a serious pledge. The pledge has been repeated authoritatively several times since. Nothing could be clearer than that Theodore Roosevelt intends to close his term of service in the presidential station in March of 1909. Why assume, then, that he was weak or insincere in what he has said on this topic? Why treat him as a man who does not know his own mind? Why imply that he was so regard for the publicity of his word? After all that Mr. Roosevelt has said in praise and in advocacy of himself and in forward dealing there is no honor to him in the assumption that all he has said is meaningless when put to the test of practice.

Clarke Bros., the new florists at Twelfth and Clay, will remember Saturday, April 27, as long as Wednesday, April 18, 1906. They were deluged all day long with a generous delegation of ladies from the remote corners of Alameda county—large ladies, little ladies, pretty ladies, not-so-pretty, matinee girls, Hayward blondes, and, in fact, college "co-eds" from Berkeley. Last night they announced in THE TRIBUNE that they would have a bouquet of carnations to each lady calling at their place of business. Little did they know that THE TRIBUNE reached about 40,000 homes in Alameda county and while

HAS TO PAY TAX ON BAIL

San Franciscan Discovers the Existence of a Little Known Law.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 27.—It will probably be news to many people, as it was to an angry citizen at the Treasurer's office yesterday, to know that bail money on deposit with the city is subject to taxation. Such is the fact.

In the case in question the owner of the money, $500 being the amount involved, had called with a court order for the release of the cash, and he was very much surprised not a little angered, to be given $490 instead of the full amount.

"You are holding back $10," he objected. "Certainly—for taxes."

"Taxes on bail money?"

"Of course. That is the law."

"Well, it's a law that I never heard of until now, and I've lived here a good many years."

Further explanations were given, but they did not satisfy the loser of the $10, who departed a very angry man.

The law requires that special deposits which are in the Treasurer's hands at the beginning of March, when the annual assessments are made, shall be subject to taxation. Bail money paid through the courts to the County Clerk and by him turned over to the Treasurer for safe keeping constitutes such a special deposit and must be taxed. In deciding how much of such money to return, the Treasurer estimates what the tax rate is to be—if it has not already been fixed—taking that of the preceding year as a basis and adding enough to cover all possible increases. In the particular instance already referred to the tax was figured at $2 on the $200—an "even money" increase from the $1.73 of the previous year. In such cases, should the rate when finally fixed prove to be less than that charged, a rebate is allowed.

NEGLECTED HIM FOR PET DOG

Homan Loved Poodle and Her Husband is Granted a Divorce.

CLEVELAND, April 27.—Gus Zimmerman was today granted a divorce from Grace Zimmerman by Judge John C. Homan. The cause was that the husband neglected his wife for a pet dog more than she did him. Mrs. Zimmerman was formerly an actress and a few days ago she was on the stage that she became so fond of dogs.

"She used to neglect me altogether in favor of that pet poodle of hers. She wouldn't go out with me nor would she pay any attention to me. She was always to be seen with a dog and she called me a pet dog. Why, she even admitted to me that she loved that dog more than she did me."

WHISKERS, HATS AND CANES
How These Accessories Have Figured in Man's Life Vanities.

An honest history of the board would lay open an undercurrent of petty vanity in many of the world's greatest figures. Henry VIII, for instance, shaved until he learned that Francis I of France wore a beard, and then he laid aside his razors and strove forever. Even the gentle Sir Thomas More had a beard which was his joy and his pride. When he was on the scaffold and the headsman was about to lift the guillotine's blade upon him, saying: Wait till I put aside my beard, for that has committed no treason.

Again there was the celebrated bishop of Clermont, who was appointed to that office shortly after the Council of Trent and who precipitately fled his bishopric one Easter Sunday morning rather than suffer the loss of his beard. What faults of future in the good bishop, a retreating jaw, a fat neck, a bushy eye, and a mustache, have revealed through the agency of the scissors and razor we know not, but that the concealment of such facial flaws has always been to a greater or less degree the motive for the growth of beards is certain.

In Mexico and other Spanish countries the hat has for centuries been the object of man's vanity. The custom found its origin in the days when the Hapsburg power was supreme, and one of the most cherished privileges that the old grandees enjoyed was that of wearing their hats in the presence of royalty. The absolute power of their monarch left them little else to do but enter into rivalry with one another in regard to the splendor of their head coverings. The gay conceit spread rapidly throughout the Spanish dominions, and even today characteristic sugar loaf hats may be found in Mexico for sale at the astounding price of from $500 to $1000 for a single hat. When our soldiers invaded Cuba and Porto Rico in 1898 the Spanish style struck their fancy, and most of those who did not come back to the States in hospital ships returned with their sedate campaign hats transformed into contraptions with high pointed crowns after the Spanish fashion.

From the time when man wandered through the pathless forests bearing on his shoulder a murderous bludgeon with which to strike down his enemies the cane has never entirely gone out of fashion. The modern world would find it much at sea without it as did the beau of whom Steele's "Tatler" spoke in 1709, when it said that the cane had "become as indispensable as any other of his limbs," and that, with the knocking of it upon his shoe, leaning one leg upon it, or whistling upon it with his mouth, he does not know how he should be good company without it. It may be flattering to the vanity of such a one to know that the grotesque knobs and arabesque heads that he delights in displaying on his walking stick are lineal descendants of the carved baton that the fools and jesters of the Middle Ages wielded—American Tailor and Cutter.

NATIVES PRONOUNCE "SAMOA."
Before leaving Samoa it is just as well to settle possible disputes and pronunciation. The natives pronounce it "Sahn-a-gah," with a strong and lingering accent on the "Sahn." And this is "Ah-pee-ah," with the accent on the second and last syllable—Apla Letter.

Stephens to take charge. He will go out on the revenue cutter Golden Gate. The baggage of the party, including that of the secretaries and servants, will be passed without examination. It is probable the party will be taken from the vessel while in the stream. They will proceed east immediately.

Admiral Bronson, U. S. N., is also on board the Siberia. He has been with the Asiatic squadron and comes home to act as chief of the bureau of navigation at Washington.

ELOPES WITH PRETTY NURSE

Courtship That Began in Sick Room Ends in Romantic Elopement.

WEBSTER CITY, Ia., April 27.—Frank Fitzmaurice, president of the Citizen's Bank of Eagle Grove, last night eloped in an automobile with Miss Nellie Ferguson, pretty twenty-year-old girl who nursed him through recent illness. Their courtship began in the sick room two months ago, and a few days ago Mr. Fitzmaurice was released from the hospital in full health. He drove to Webster City from his home in Eagle Grove in an automobile. Miss Ferguson was waiting for him at the trying place, and the two were married by a justice of the peace in a nearby town. Their secret marriage created a great sensation here. Nothing was suspected by the parents of the girl, because there is a difference of five years between the ages of Fitzmaurice and his bride. They will go to Honolulu for their honeymoon trip.

BLIZZARD SWEEPS OVER SOUTH DAKOTA

SIOUX CITY, Ia., April 27.—Nearly the entire State of South Dakota is being swept by the worst blizzard of the season. The heaviest fall of snow for the winter is reported from many places.

A Rosebud Reformation states that there is great hardship among the settlers because of a shortage of fuel. Among the victims are the widows of the late city bred, who have either spent the winter on their farms or have some there during the blizzard weeks preceding this to get spring work started.

"Boss, I declare I dunno how to 'plain any mo', 'cept to say hit am jes' the same diffunce 'twixt you and er first-class lawyer."

FASHION SALON

Parisienne Millinery That Gladdens the Eye at Maison's.

One of the creditable stores that have opened up in Oakland within the past year is the Maison Millinery Salon at Fourteenth and Clay, in the Touraine Hotel block. Daily this fashionable millinery store is visited by the most fastidious and correctly gowned ladies, who express delight at the chic collection of Parisienne and Domestic models shown here.

On Monday a generous reduction will be placed on all seasonable models, and it is safe to predict a large attendance at the first reduction sale.

Furniture on credit--how to arrange for it

Come right into the store and tell any salesman that you want to purchase some goods on credit—he will take your name and address and immediately assist you in picking out whatever you desire.

As nine out of every ten customers ask for credit, it will not be unusual for you to ask for credit also—

In fact everybody has more opportunities to use cash than they have cash and asking for credit is only business in its strictest sense

We have been extending credit to the people of Alameda county for years. Some of the wealthiest people in our vicinity have taken advantage of our longest payment plans. And, too, some of the hardest working folks have bought in the same way.

We believe we are a help to the people—we try to be, at least—and want you all to feel that the courtesies of the firm are at the disposal of any earnestly inclined person of this county.

We will help you furnish up your home from kettles and cook stove to draperies and parlor furniture. We will accept a small deposit and allow you to pay the balance as you can.

It makes no difference whether you earn $6 a week or $60 a week your credit is good just the same.

Now suppose you fix up that unfurnished room. Why, you can rent it for enough to buy the furniture.

Or, if you board, why not buy your own furniture and save $10 a month by renting unfurnished apartments.

It's easy—It's sensible—It's business.

GIRLS NOW SELECT ENGAGEMENT RINGS

Instead of the once-inevitable diamond solitaire, the engaged girl has won a pretty independence in the matter of what the token of her betrothal shall be.

Birthstones are wonderfully popular for engagement rings, and the "Mizpah" bracelets (the kind that fasten on "for keeps" and have to be ignominiously flung off if the engagement is broken) are about equally popular, the bracelets probably best liked of all tokens for those engagements which must necessarily be a matter of years, and are consequently not announced at once.

Perhaps the prettiest of all betrothal gifts, though, was a ring—not a usual ring, by any odds, but a circlet of diamonds, the stone set between two more rims of gold.

And one girl, who was in business, hit upon a clever way of wearing a ring without letting it tell the tale it usually does. The only man had a replica of his seal ring made for her to wear on her little finger.

A little while before the wedding, when her engagement was made public, she put the other beautiful ring he had given her on the important fourth finger. But the little-finger ring, she said, was the "real" ring.—Chicago Daily News.

SQUEEZING THE GRAPES.

"In wine making," said a wine expert, "the grapes are squeezed from one to six times, and from each squeeze a different grade of wine is made." That is why from one district and from one firm so many varieties of wine come. These varieties don't mean that each is made from a different kind of grape. They mean, as a rule, that they are made from different squeezes of the same grape. The first squeeze, of course, makes the best and dearest wine. When you buy this grade you will always find on the label the words "Premier Cru," first squeeze.

This we are willing to endorse in very distinct terms, because we have secured abundant evidence justifying us in so doing. ## OHIO ENTERS PROVERB HUNT

Interest in "Tribune's" Contest Reaches to Buuckeye State

Each day witnesses a decided increase of enthusiasm in the TRIBUNE Proverb Hunt contest and letters of inquiry continue to flow in from all parts of the United States and Canada. The twentieth day of the contest has passed and next Friday will witness the last day of the first half of the fifty days of the hunt which has attracted such wide attention and keen interest.

It might help the thousands of contestants if they kept the pictures from day to day to look back at for reference. Among the numerous letters of inquiry received from places of great distance from here is a letter written by L. J. Kinner, a prominent merchant of New Bedford, Ohio. Mr. Kinner is anxious to know whether or not the TRIBUNE would change the date set for the time that all answers must be in from one week after the close of the contest until three weeks.

While it has not been decided just what will be done in regard to this proposed change at the present time, some definite decision will be reached in a few days at which time it will be announced.

Mr. Kinner wishes to join the many other eastern subscribers of the TRIBUNE and states that he is holding the subscriptions of several of his New Bedford friends until he is informed regarding the decision of the TRIBUNE in reference to the changing of the closing time for the answers.

It was the original intention to close the contest one week after the publication of the last picture, which will be exactly one month from today, as thirty more pictures are yet to appear. Mr. Kinner fears that the last picture will not reach him in time for him to mail his answer before the close and it is for this reason that he asks the change.

Subscribers of the bay counties who have failed to receive their TRIBUNE regularly and who wish to complete their files of the proverbs will be supplied through the business office of the TRIBUNE in Oakland.

BID GRAMMAR

A Denver school teacher a young woman, went with several friends to attend a spiritualistic seance at a "medium's" home on the East side the other evening. She went just for fun. None of the party believed in spiritualism; they simply wanted to see what would happen. The school teacher by the way, is highly educated. Several "experiments" were given, and then the spiritualist came out in the audience and asked the school teacher if there was any dead friend she'd like to hear from. The "experiments" had rather impressed the young woman and she began to take a little stock in the proceedings.

"I'd like to hear my dead cousin Mary speak please," she said.

"All right," said the "medium." "What is your name please?"

"It is Ida So-and-So."

The "medium" went behind a curtain and the lights were turned out. A moment later a voice said: "I am Miss Mary So-and-So. I shall speak to my cousin Ida."

The school teacher was nervously excited. "It sounds a little like her voice," she said to one of her friends. "I am watching you daily," said the voice.

"It's she, I'm sure," said the school teacher. Then the voice spoke again. "Why have you come here?" it asked.

"I've come," said everything. "Stop your faking," the school teacher called to the "medium." "My cousin was educated. She wouldn't be guilty of saying 'have come' for the world."

The school teacher then insisted on leaving. She was thoroughly mad.

HERMANN GETS HIS FREEDOM

Jurors in Famous Trial Return Verdict of Not Guilty

WASHINGTON, April 27.—Blinger Hermann, former Congressman from Oregon and former Commissioner of the General Land Office, was acquitted of the charge of destroying permanent records by a verdict of the jury at 12 o'clock today. The trial had progressed for 15 weeks and the jury deliberated 21 hours. Nothing was heard from the jury room after the jury retired at 3:30 yesterday afternoon until 11 o'clock today when word came that it was decided that Justice Stafford should be charged to return a verdict after brief argument of counsel and the next hour and a half was consumed in reading the charge. At 10 o'clock last night had sent word to the jury room that it would be better at that time a drop consideration of the case and get some sleep advised that the jury proceeded to their luncheon before again endeavoring to reach an agreement. The jury however disregarded this admonition and within ten minutes after its second retirement appeared with the verdict of not guilty.

There was immediately a general scene of congratulation in the courtroom. Hermann expressed his thanks to each juror as did his counsel. United States Attorney Baker and many others in the courtroom congratulated the defendant.

EDNA MAY IS COMPLIMENTED

London Pays High Tribute to America's Popular Actress on Her Retirement.

LONDON, April 27.—Edna May was given a great demonstration tonight on the occasion of her last appearance on the stage which she abandons to marry Oscar Lewisohn. Her admirers have sent thousands of requests for souvenirs and photographs since her approaching retirement was announced, and a line of gallery gods today waited at the theater from early morning for seats. The performance was followed by a supper-dance at the Savoy Hotel to which all the members of her company were invited.

A BIG QUESTION.

The statement that the moderate use of alcoholic beverages (as an article of diet) is for adults usually beneficial ought not to be publicly announced as in harmony with the views of the leading clinical teachers of medicine and surgery in this country except upon the authority of an overwhelming weight of numbers.

The members of the teaching staffs of our medical schools are well-known and can be readily approached. Have they been approached? If so how is the absence of their names to be reconciled with the claim of the manifesto to speak on their behalf?

If these teachers have not been approached what right have the signatories to speak for them? Until these questions are answered the moral weight of the manifesto is nothing more than that of the individual opinions of those whose names it bears.—London Hospital.

TO ESTABLISH NEW THEATER

Empire Circuit Will Come Here—Roof Garden for Tenth Street.

The Empire Theater Circuit Company, whose properties extend throughout the Eastern and Middle States have leased the two-story structure at 415-421 Tenth street, owned by the Austin Realty Company, and will reconstruct the building and turn it into a first-class vaudeville playhouse. Work on the new theater, which will be modern in every detail, will commence immediately and should be ready for the first bill in a very few weeks.

The new showhouse, when completed, will boast the largest stage of any popular-price vaudeville theater in the city. The auditorium, which will be built on a thoroughly efficient slope, will be equipped with nineteen-inch upholstered opera chairs of the best variety. A new feature of the proposed playhouse will be the system and facilities for disposing of the crowds after the finish of the performance and in case of fire.

The entire frontage of the building will practically be an entrance, as at a moment's notice it can be thrown open. This will be done by a system of doors built adjoining one another, running from one side of the building to the other. The seating capacity will be eight hundred when the theater is first opened, but a balcony with a capacity equivalent to that of the lower floor will be erected as soon as the Empire company is able to secure the lease from the owners of the lodging house over the building.

THIRTY-FOOT STAGE.

The stage will be thirty feet wide and sixteen feet deep and will be larger than any of the other vaudeville house stages in the city. The dressing rooms of the playhouse will be built in the rear of the Brook saloon at 413 Tenth street and an exit will open into the bar.

In view of the additional amount of business that will be attracted to the immediate vicinity by the erection of the playhouse the American-Italian restaurant, which owns a ten-year lease on the roof of Nos. 409, 411, 413 and 415 Tenth street, will at a cost of $100,000 build a roof garden to be on the order of Tait's Pompano gardens in San Francisco. The main dining room will be 44 by 64 feet, with a bandstand 10 feet by 8 feet. The banquet hall will be 16 feet by 55 feet, and a kitchen 20 feet by 40 feet will be on the same floor as the garden, in addition to the kitchen in the present cafe at 409 Tenth street. The interior decorations, as well as the artistic architectural design, will outdo any cafe in the State outside of San Francisco.

INTERESTING FINISH OF ANTIQUATED EGGS

"What becomes of all the bad eggs" asked the reporter. "I never thought of that. Do they go to waste?"

"Indeed they don't," the dairymaid replied. "Bad egg dealing is a business in itself. All bad eggs go to tanners and papermakers."

"These eggs are carefully opened by hand, and the whites are separated from the yolks—unpleasant, smelly work but work that no machine can do. The yolks are mixed with flour and salt, and this dough is sold to the leather men, who size and dress hides with it."

"The whites are used in the sizing of fine paper. Care must be taken that they are properly separated, as the least bit of yolk in them would cause a yellow streak upon the paper's surface."

"Confectioners used to buy slightly stale, flavory white too, but since the pure-food hulkabullos these men have only used fresh whites in their candies."—Baltimore Sun.

MISS CAMILLE JOHNSTON TELLS OF YEAR'S TRAVELS

MISS CAMILLE JOHNSTON, WHO LEAVES HER ALAMEDA HOME TO RULE OVER HISTORICAL IRISH ESTATE.

Talented Berkeley Girl Gives Interesting Story of Her Experiences in Eastern Countries.

Brought to public conspicuity first by her exceptional talent as an architect of originality, later on to become distinguished as an artist of daring originality, then to be received by the sovereigns of four great nations, and finally to step from her wisteria-covered home in Alameda to become mistress of one of the great historical estates in Ireland, are a few of the incidents by which fame has attended to waylay a lass of this city.

When Camille Johnston, supplied amusement to the co-eds of the University by her clever caricatures and comic illustrations for the various college periodicals, even her rivals predicted that the laughter-loving prankster would be destined to make the world notice her. Camille's sprightly wit flattered over the columns of the University papers with rollicking abandon for the best of good-natured laughter and mellowed its satire. By verse, by picture and by story, Miss Johnston gave expression to the joy of life as it appeared to her, and when she announced immediately after her graduation that she and her brother Howard, then also a student at the University, were going to make a tour of the world far from the well-trodden paths of the conventional globe-trotter, her friends knew that the trip would not be barren of startling incidents.

TRAVELED A YEAR.

Camille Johnston passed out of Golden Gate on the Siberia—the same that took Princess Alice on her celebrated voyage across the Pacific—just a little over a year ago returning a few days ago by way of the eastern gate across the Sierras. And the predictions made by her friends have more than come true. Camille did not stay there. As we floated down the river there were hundreds of Chinaese whirl just long enough to notice her and to give her the due merited by her talent and personality. During the year spent in exploring the unnoticed corners of the world, Miss Johnston has time and time again set her feet into places where no American woman before her had the daring to go. She has lived the life of the Chinese peasant as well as that of the aristocratic Mandarin class, making the perilous river journey up the Great Canal, barely escaping the ferocious pirates that infest the inland seas of China, only to fall into the hands of a pack of fanatical religious zealots from whom escape seemed at one time impossible.

MANY STRANGE EXPERIENCES.

"Of course we had many unusual experiences while touring in the interior of China and during our voyage in a houseboat up the Great Canal from Peking to Canton, but I think our most terrifying experience was one day while returning from a little village where we had gone to see certain silk factories. We had left our boat in charge of our Chinese Lohah, as they call a captain, there were seven of us—all Americans. The women in our party were inside this little house trying to negotiate for the purchase of some silk. When we came outside, there was a howling mob of Chinese screaming, throwing stones and sticks and shouting 'White devil!' at us at the top of their screechy, snarling voices. Everybody can say 'White devil' even though perhaps, not another word of English be known in the entire village.

"We went in haste for our crew of 17, and for the police, to protect us, and had quite a time reaching our boat. You may be sure that we did not stay there. As we floated down the river there were hundreds of Chinese standing on the great bridges above us throwing missiles down on us and spitting at us.

CAUSE OF THE TROUBLE

"It seems that in this particular village the people had, a few years prior to this occurrence, engaged in a bitter and altogether unpleasant warfare with some missionaries who had come there in the attempt to buy all the silk output of that locality. They thought we were missionaries and were likewise engaged in an attempt to buy up all the silk. It seems that all the silk industry is now controlled by one great trust, and those in charge of the affairs of this trust see it that no one poaches on their field of profit.

CANTON REMAINS UNCHANGED

"It was while in Canton that we saw the great gulf between Occidental and Oriental civilization. The walled city of Canton, which is a different from the modern city of Canton as night is from day, is in precisely the same stage of progress that it was a thousand years ago. There we saw criminals in stocks on the street corners, being put to death by slow strangulation. This class of offenders was placed in cages and left to stand on a small mound of bricks, their hands and heads being fastened in upright stocks. Every day one brick would be removed, thus leaving the man without any feeling. Several of these men on street corners in cages—the most ghastly, haunting sight I ever laid my eyes on.

EXECUTIONS ARE PUBLIC

"But probably the very worst thing we saw as an example of Chinese custom was the manner in which executions were held. The executions are all public, anyone being permitted to witness them. Up in the interior, where European custom has made an impression, condemned criminal may be executed at any time upon payment of a small sum. Frequently Europeans and Americans too, pay five dollars to the jailer, who then orders the condemned man to be brought before the headsman, to make a spectacle for the diversions of the foreigners and the mob. I was shocked when first told of this, and would not believe that our own American soldiers and officers would participate in such a brutal spectacle, but this happened during our voyage up the Grand Canal.

But not all was of this ghastly, grey some nature," continued Miss Johnston. "We met a number of missionaries who have lived in the interior for many years. In the interior, many of them, adopt the Chinese manner of dressing entirely, both men and women wearing the regulation loose robes that have been in vogue in China for the past few hundred years. We saw a number of European missionaries who had permitted their hair to grow into a queue.

"Traveling in the interior of China or Japan is comparatively easy, and living expenses are ridiculously inexpensive. In Japan one feels absolutely safe. I believe that a woman could travel in the interior of Japan with perfect safety. In China, however, it is different. There are so many national communities that the hatred of one people arouses them to a murderous frenzy on the slightest provocation."

PRESENTED TO EMPEROR.

Miss Johnston was present last year at the cherry blossom festival held in Tokyo in the royal gardens. It was during this time that she was presented to the Emperor and the Empress of Japan. Miss Johnston was the guest in Tokyo of Mrs. Mary Wilson Wisner, a well-known Berkeley girl, whose husband, Percy Wisner, is one of the wealthy English importers with headquarters in Tokyo.

WILL WED IN IRELAND.

Miss Johnston continued her art studies in India and other parts of tropical Asia, continuing her journey by slow stages through southern Europe. It was while Miss Johnston was the guest of relatives in Ireland that she met the Honorable Mr. James Delany, an Irish land holder of wealth and distinguished lineage, to whom Miss Johnston announced her engagement this week. Miss Johnston leaves for New York shortly, joining her mother there. The marriage is to take place on the Delany country estate in Queens, Ireland.

HOME COMPANY OFFICIALS DENY BRIBE CHARGES

TAYLORS WILL BE DIVORCED

Wealthy New York Couple Agree to Disagree and Settle Finances.

NEW YORK, April 27.—Talbot J. Taylor and his wife, who is a daughter of James R. Keene, according to information obtained from an authoritative source tonight, have come to an understanding that the divorce proceedings instituted by Mrs. Taylor will not be defended by her husband. Under this agreement, so it is announced, Mrs. Taylor will secure a settlement of $200,000 and go abroad until the divorce is granted. Mrs. Taylor will take over the magnificent country place at Cedarhurst, L. I., and will have the custody of the four children. Mr. Taylor will abandon his offices at 20 Broad street and they will be occupied by Mr. Keene, who will retain the office organization and make the place his headquarters.

While it has been known for some time that Mr. and Mrs. Taylor were living apart there was no indication of a divorce proceeding until the ## Village Is Divided Against Itself on Subject.

NUDE STATUES RULED OUT OF DANBURY SCHOOL.

Committeemen of the Connecticut town were grossly shocked to find that two celebrated Greek pieces had been put up in the high school without so much as a Mother Hubbard to cover their classic limbs. The committeemen demanded at once that a suit of clothes be found each for Apollo and the Discus Thrower, or that they be sent to a more secluded spot than the high school. The town was torn by the factional row that resulted, but the advocates of clothes for plaster men won, and the statues have been removed.

Quaint Townspeople Shocked by the Barrenness of Apollo and He Is Ousted Forever.

DANBURY, Conn., April 27.—This peaceful town is a house divided against itself, and all on account of the shocking nudity of two cold-hearted gentlemen.

The gentlemen in question are familiarly known as "Apollo Belvedere" and the "Discus Thrower." It was their misfortune to be born in a warm Grecian climate, at a time when suit and pajamas were undiscovered,

The barrenness of the building had induced the students to chip in and buy the two marble slabs, bearing many figures, among which were Apollo and the Discus Thrower. But the two committeemen could not see how bare figures helped along a bare building, and, besides this, they were unutterably shocked.

Apollo, as may be recalled, is attired in a fig-leaf, carelessly thrown over one arm, and a fig-leaf, and his companion is minus the fig-leaf. This was too much for Uncle Bill and Captain Mike, who then and there declared war against the whole brood of Phidias et al and issued the following order:

"They may be all right at the Vatican," said the former, "but they can't stay in Danbury unless their nakedness is hidden, and well hidden, at that."

Thus the fat went forth, and thus was stirred up the widest controversy known in these parts since the last change in the wood used for making nutmegs. One party arose which stood for trousers at any cost, even if the feet of the Greeks had to be sawed loose from the slab so that the limber attire might be properly adjusted.

The other party advocated a flowing raiment, claiming that the style in trousers might change suddenly, and thus precipitate another crisis.

The undergarments also caused strife. Some were for balbriggan and some for linen mesh, while there was a small all-wool faction.

ARE ASKED TO EXPLAIN CASE

Stormy Session Is Held by the Grand Jury and Refusals Are Made.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 27.—To explain discrepancies found in the books of the Home Telephone Company by the Grand Jury expert, J. A. Brown, secretary of the corporation, and E. H. Martin, treasurer, were called before the inquisitorial body today. They objected to answering the questions put to them by Assistant District Attorney Heney. When pressed by the prosecutor, Brown declared that he would not incriminate himself.

It was the evidence turned up by William Stuart, expert accountant, who was sent to Los Angeles to go over the books of the company, that brought the two officials before the body. In the report made by the expert it was found that there were in the ledgers of the corporation several mysterious entries, whose amounts tallied with those sums the supervisors confessed to having received for their votes.

Brown and Martin arrived in the city three weeks ago, but the matter upon which they were called today is the most important that has developed in the investigation of the Home Company.

DEATH COMES OF SNEEZING

Curious and Sudden Ending of Wyoming Shepherd's Life.

MEETETSE, Wyo., April 27.—Henry Goodmiller, a Wyoming shepherd, began to sneeze several days ago and he sneezed almost uninterruptedly until he fell over dead. The bursting of a blood vessel, caused by the violent attack of sneezing, was the immediate and direct cause of the man's death. Goodmiller had contracted a severe cold, which settled in his head. The sneezing attack which resulted in his death came on a few minutes after he arose from his bed in the morning and he could not check it. He sneezed constantly and very violently for ten or fifteen minutes. Suddenly he fell over and expired.

LACTEAL FLUID WAS WATERED

Pioneer Citizen of Berkeley Finds That Milkman Buncoed Him.

BERKELEY, April 27.—University science has been brought to bear on the milk question in East Berkeley during the last week. One of the pioneer citizens of Berkeley, Noah Norton Webster, has been bringing samples of the lacteal fluid furnished by his milkman, who in this case happens to be a German woman, to Prof. M. E. Jaffa of the Agricultural College, and the analysis has proven to the satisfaction of all but the lady in the case that the milk received more water than the cow originally intended.

Though the cows furnishing the milk are good looking animals of the Jersey breed, the amount of butter fat in all the samples is very low, averaging little above three and one-half per cent. The sugar, however, which ought to be present, is almost entirely lacking, there being such a small quantity that Prof. Jaffa declares that the cow must be sick or the milk watered.

He says, "the cuteness of the seller is evident from the fact that the proportion of butter fat is just above the legal requirement while there is no law requiring that the amount of sugar of milk be above any standard, there is a law against selling watered milk, and the analysis proves that charge, unless the cow is sick."

The dispensers of the liquid indignantly denies the charge. "My husband will tend to Mr. Webster's case," she says with determination.

The venerable complainant came to Berkeley in 1866 and has been here pretty nearly all the time since. He claims to be a distant relative of the great Daniel Webster. He is the owner of a three-acre tract at 444 Webster street, which was named after him, and is about to sell part of the land and build on the rest.

PROPOSE LEVY; CREATE STORM

Olympic Clubmen Object to Being Assessed $100 for Bath House.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 27.—The announcement made a few days ago that the directors of the Olympic Club would levy a $100 assessment to erect the new building in which it is proposed to house the bathing plant, has caused such a storm of protest from the members that the directors at their meeting on Friday decided not to take any action at present, and the question of the proposed assessment was postponed indefinitely.

Another effort will be made to raise the money on the club's promissory notes, and it is expected to be finally decided within a week or two, whether the assessment will be necessary or not.

VICTOR, Ala., April 27.—Two men are dead, two dying and two others seriously wounded as the result of a bloody duel here this afternoon during the progress of the commencement exercises.

DOES NOT LIKE TO PRISON OR WHITE HOUSE

Oil King Said to be Trying to Get Rid of Realty he Owns.

NEW YORK, April 27.—When the dispatches stating that John D. Rockefeller was giving away his real estate holdings in Chicago, Cleveland, New York and elsewhere were shown to one of his closest friends, the friend, who has been one of his only companions, said:

"The world has never known the true Mr. Rockefeller. There is one thing that he has always wanted and that is real estate. He has been trying for years to get rid of what he owns. He realizes that he has only a few more years to live and he wants to get rid of the things that are now resting on him. The dispatches which have been read to me indicate that he is finally carrying out a plan that has been long in his mind. I may say in a few days telegrams will be coming from all over the country saying that he has turned over to 'Johnny' every foot of real estate that he owns."

Mr. Rockefeller wants "Johnny" to understand the responsibility of real estate ownership and wants to put upon the young man all the burdens that he has known. He wants to have the property in the hands of a man who will be able to help him with advice, but he wants no more to do with it than in an advisory capacity. "Now, for instance, there is that estate in Westchester county at Tarrytown, which Mr. Rockefeller purchased several years ago. The old gentleman wanted a country home. He started out with a thousand acres. The first thing he did was to sign it over to 'Johnny.' A thousand acre tract was too much for him; it got on his nerves. How much do you think he owns now? Well, he has kept adding to the original purchase until he has now unloaded on the boy just 600 acres. The way 'Johnny' has taken care of this land has given him confidence, and that is why he is turning over to him the rest of his real estate throughout the country."

SEASON CLOSING. LAKEWOOD, N. J., April 27.—Mr. and Mrs. John D. Rockefeller are preparing to leave here next week, as the season is practically over. They are going to Florida for a certain stay with Mr. and Mrs. John D. Rockefeller, Jr., and then will go on to their home in Cleveland to spend the summer.

Big Party of Mystic Shriners From New England Are En Route To This State.

BOSTON, April 27.—A big party of New England Mystic Shriners have started for the Pacific Coast on a twenty-five days' trip, during which they will attend the annual session of the Imperial Council in Los Angeles May 5 to 11. The outward trip will be via Colorado Springs and the Grand Canyon, returning via San Francisco and over the divide through Salt Lake and Denver. "There are many from Vermont and New Hampshire in the party."

APRIL ASTHMA

Conquered to Stay Cured—No Hay Fever This Summer.

NEW YORK, April 27.—Previous experiments have proven conclusively that asthma can be cured permanently and hay fever prevented if a course of Toxoid treatment is taken during the months of April and May. During these spring months the entire system is more susceptible to treatment than any other season of the year. Toxoid is the new discovery which gives quick relief and is pleasant to take.

The Toxoid Laboratory, 1289 Broadway, New York City, has generously offered to send a free sample of Toxoid by mail to any sufferer who will send name and address.

TO PRISON OR WHITE HOUSE

Just Beginning to Discriminate Where to Send Them Says Professor.

BERKELEY, April 27.—"We are just beginning to discriminate between the men who should be sent to the White House for doing things and those who should be sent to the penitentiary for doing things," said Professor Alexis Lange, dean of the college of letters, to his class today. "The menace to our country is the man who is so-called good citizen working merely for himself. In our country there is a definite and ruthless individualism. Self-reliance and initiative are pointed to by the foreigner as the secret of our success."

"Better provision should be made for industrial training so that each citizen can carry his own weight in the nation and be independent. But care should be taken that it is not the return to education. The question is not so often asked as formerly, 'Does a college education pay?' This question must be asked in a new way. The proper question is 'Does the college graduate return public spirit and efficiency for value received from the public?' If the return is inadequate interest? Is it not out of the student who continually sees education on a selfish basis."

"No one is liberally educated unless he is prepared to take an active part in the life of the nation. Education may be anti-social. The most antithetical form is early specialization. We need more specialists in every form of life, but society could not do without the return of the public spirit. The public nor educational practice has reached the social side; only the individualistic. One social institution in America is football. University spirit is coming to be among the things for which a university should stand. It is youthful and vigorous, but it contains the seeds of public spirit. If the college is to be connected with a thinking headpiece, it would be a great thing."

BELIEVE WOMAN WAS MURDERED

Wounds on Face Lead Police to Scout the Idea of Suicide.

NEW YORK, April 27.—In the finding of the partly clothed body of a handsome woman this afternoon on a little strip of land known as Trail Island, which is separated from Blooming and the New Jersey shore by the Sierren Island Sound, the police of the island have another mystery on their hands.

Deputy Coroner Bennett of Richmond is so far unable to determine whether the woman met death by drowning and was washed up on the island or whether she was killed and conveyed to the island in a boat.

There are two wounds on the woman's face which the deputy coroner says were sufficient to cause death. One of the wounds is directly over the nose and another on the right side of the face, close to the temple. Both, apparently, had been inflicted with a blunt instrument.

PERFECTING PLANS FOR EXPOSITION

BERKELEY, April 27.—Arrangements for the California Assenly Colvory expansion to be held at Bakersfield this summer are rapidly being perfected by Dean Percival and his faculty at the University of California professors. A feature of the Assembly is to be the attention given to athletic sports outside of the curricular program.

LEAVE PARIS IN BALLOON

Santos-Dumont and Party Sail Out of Sight in Giant Aerostat.

PARIS, April 27.—M. Santos-Dumont and nine others, including the best balloonists of France, made an ascent today in the Eagle, a giant aerostat with capacity of 20,000 cubic meters. This ascent was made from St. Cloud and was witnessed by a large crowd. A fair breeze was blowing and the balloon sailed away out of sight, going toward the south-west.

TAKES POISON AND SHOOT HIMSELF TWICE

SANTA CLARA, April 27.—In a moment of desperation caused by ill-health and worry over financial matters, George F. Schultz, a harness-maker, residing at Santa Clara, committed suicide in his city today, by shooting himself twice with a revolver, one bullet penetrating the head and the other his heart.

A partially drained bottle of carbolic acid, which was found near Schultz' body, indicated that he may have taken the poison just before firing the fatal shots.

The deed was committed in the harness shop where he was employed. He was 48 years old and single.

SIXTEEN CASES ON JUDGE'S CALENDAR

SAN FRANCISCO, April 27.—In Judge Cook's court today there were 16 cases on the calendar for arraignment, perhaps the largest number set for one day in the history of the department. The charges included burglary, robbery, grand larceny and murder. One man pleaded guilty and the other 15 cases were set for trial on various dates between May 1st and May 10th. Among those who answered "not guilty" was C. J. Ahlborn, accused of the murder of his wife. His case was heard May 12th.

GRANDSON OF GRANT TO WED

Will Marry Descendant of Germany's George Washington, Alfred the Great.

WASHINGTON, April 27.—A noted society event will be the wedding here, in June, of Miss Helen Dent Wrenshall, a pretty and talented Washington girl, to Chaffee Grant, of San Diego, Cal., a grandson of the late General U. S. Grant. Miss Wrenshall is a lineal descendant of Alfred the Great. She is the daughter of the late Edward Wrenshall, a prominent banker of this city and is prominent in society. The love affair surrounding the lives of Miss Wrenshall and Mr. Grant is touched with a pretty romance that dates back to early childhood.

When but a small boy, Grant was sent to Washington to attend the Trinity Hall Military School, then conducted by his cousin William Smith. While a cadet in the school, he became acquainted with Miss Wrenshall. They fell in love and agreed to marry when Grant was old enough.

Grant, after leaving Trinity Hall, went to California with his parents, but corresponded with his sweetheart. He is now engaged in the real estate business in San Diego. His father, U. S. Grant, Jr., is now erecting a million-dollar hotel in that city. His uncle is General Fred Grant, in command of the department of the East, with headquarters at New York. The Wrenshall family is descended from Alfred the Great through Edward the Elder, whose third daughter married a count of Vermandois, the founder of the line. Miss Wrenshall and her fiancé are fourth cousins.

THE POET'S TRIUMPH

He wrote a poem to the rose, And to an editor it went: Within a week or thereabout Back to the poet it was sent.

He sent it here, he sent it there, But disappointment was his lot; It was returned to him each time, Some editors declared it rot.

He made the poem over new, And in it he compared the rose To San-diego's sweet-scented soap. Best friend skin of human knows.

And then he sent it off once more, A check came back his heart to cheer, At once he ate a big square meal, And drank five shooters of beer.

SOCIETY MAN SUED BY WIFE

Mrs. Mary Hutton Pell Seeks Divorce From Wealthy and Prominent Husband.

NEW YORK, April 27.—Mrs. Mary Hutton Pell, wife of Alexander Mercer Pell, a young man well-known in New York and London society and a grandson of General Mercer has begun proceedings against her husband for absolute divorce. Supreme Court Justice O'Gorman today appointed Charles F. Ellis as referee to hear the testimony.

Not since the famous W. K. Vanderbilt divorce have the court officials maintained such secrecy as they are at the present time in the Pell case. Although it is known that the referee was appointed, there is no record whatever of the reference in the county clerk's office. The justice, referee, lawyers for both sides and the principals are reticent and the case bids fair to be fought to a conclusion without the name of the correspondent reaching the public. The referee will begin to take testimony at once.

The papers were filed today and inspection of them was not permitted.

WON $200,000; THEN THERE WAS CHAMPAGNE

LONDON, April 27.—A Rome correspondent tells of an all-night banquet (8 p. m. to 8 a. m.) given to 100 guests by a Swiss commercial traveler, who has won the Italian lottery prize of £40,000. They put away 275 bottles of champagne between them, which is at the rate of two bottles and three-quarters per man.

REAL EMBARRASSMENT. "Does it never embarrass you?" asked of the Pittsburgh millionaire, "when you happen to be in a position where you have to introduce your wife to one of your ex-wives?"

"Not very much," he replied. "The only embarrassing moment is when I find myself so placed that I have to introduce my present wife to my last ex-wife."

WHITE HOUSE IS DESERTED

President and Entire Official Family Are Absent for First Time.

WASHINGTON, April 27.—For the first time in many years the President and his entire official family are absent from the national capital. A number of the cabinet members accompanied the President to the Jamestown Exposition opening, Secretary Wilson has gone to Pittsburg, Secretary Root to Clinton, N. Y., Secretary Taft to Cincinnati, Postmaster General Meyer to New York and Boston, and Attorney General Bonaparte to Boston.

The only other occasions upon which there have been familiar withdrawals from Washington of the President and all of the heads of the executive departments within many years was in connection with the funeral of Secretary Gresham, when President Cleveland and all of his colleagues of the deceased cabinet officers left Washington for Indiana on a special funeral train and at the time of the death of President McKinley at Buffalo.

There is even a noticeable absence of assistant secretaries of the various departments, many of them being at Jamestown or away from Washington on official or private business.

SAY HERMANN IS 'NOT GUILTY'

Freed on Charge of Destroying Public Records of Land Office.

WASHINGTON, April 27.—"Not guilty." This was the verdict today of the jury in the case of Former Representative Blinger Hermann of Oregon, who has been on trial in Criminal Court No. 1 for the last ten weeks on a charge of destroying public records of the land office. The act for which Hermann was indicted was in January, 1903, several weeks before he was removed from the commission of the general land office. The charge was destroying thirty-five letter press copy books, containing official records of the office.

Hermann admitted destroying the books, but claimed they were private books and contained his personal correspondence, and that he was the custodian of the office to keep such books for the private use of the commissioner.

The government contended that the books contained official records, and that they were destroyed by Hermann to cover up his connection with land frauds, and thus do away with evidence that could be used against him.

The jury retired at 3:30 yesterday afternoon.

HYDE CASE ADJOURNED.

WASHINGTON, April 27.—The Hyde-Benson-Diamond-Snyder case, which has been on trial here in the Criminal Court all week, was today postponed until the third Monday in October upon request of the attorneys representing Messrs. Hyde and Benson. The attorney for Mr. Diamond acquiesced in the adjournment on the ground that the trial could not be concluded for at least four months and the courts adjourn during the months of July and August.

There are at least seventy-five witnesses for the government in Washington, brought from the Coast States, and they will all return home and come here again in the fall, at great expense to the government.

There are several hundred indictments against the accused, charging frauds in the granting of lands in California, Oregon and Washington.

HOW HE SAVED TIME.

A Glendale mother went into the room of her 10-year-old son Saturday night to kiss him good night. As she entered the room she was astonished to hear the little fellow say, "You are God, read that!" after which he gave her a leap and landed in bed.

"Why, Frankie," she said, "what on earth do you mean by such talk?"

The boy grinned. "That's the way I pray now, mamma," he replied.

"You pray? What do you mean?" she asked.

"Why, I just point to that 'an' let God read it, himself. It saves lots of time for me."

In the dresser the woman found a framed prayer by Robert Louis Stevenson leaning against the mirror. Frankie had found it in his sister's room and it had given him the bright idea.

"KISSING CHILDREN IS CRIMINAL," SAYS NURSE

Miss Lindeman's Death Leads Superintendent of Sanatorium to Lead Crusade Against Habit.

MISS PAULINE MALONE.

In the innocent days of long ago, when the world was young and unsophisticated, 'twas then that ignorance was bliss. In those primitive times, science had not waylaid the insidious germ that lurks in the kiss and vivisectioned and analyzed it off the sanitary face of the civilized world. That is precisely what has been done. "Kissing," as Kipling prefers to call it, is taboo. According to the germ-hunters, the victims of the kissing habit outnumber the census of those that fall in battle.

When the learned M. D.'s of the laboratories attached to the great universities announced that they had analyzed the kiss and found that it was a thing to be dreaded worse than the plague, folks merely pooch-pooched his announcement and scorned it as one of the delusions of the faddists. The world went on in its old way, either believing that it was immune from the scientist's most recently discovered germ, or that it was preferable to fall a victim than to be unloved.

But proof that this warning was not in vain is found in the recent death of Miss Lindeman, a beautiful girl of Alameda, who died as the result of having kissed a young child whom she was nursing through a mild stage of typhoid. Now an anti-kissing crusade is being organized by the nurses of Alameda and vicinity that such a tragic fate might not befall another one of their number.

"Of course, it is quite futile to warn grown-up folks against the hazardous practice of kissing," declared Miss Creedon, superintendent of the Alameda Sanatorium, where Miss Lindeman was taking an under-graduate course in this profession.

"It would be folly to speak against the dangers of kissing on the part of mature persons," continued Miss Creedon, with stolid philosophy, smiling a smile that expressed the hopelessness of impressing persons who seemed to be infatuated with their folly.

HABIT IS CRIMINAL.

"But there is one thing that we, as nurses, and that physicians should be emphatic about if we are sincere in our work of alleviating suffering. I refer to the habit some people have of kissing children. It is criminal—awful—and I dare say, if we could but prove it, it could be shown that many a child has died from the effect of being kissed by an adult person."

"It seems to be quite the proper thing for the admiring relatives and friends to smother the little pet of the family in the hot breath of kisses. I have often shuddered as I saw this sort of thing down town. If the child happened to be prepossessing, the nurse, thinking nothing of speaking to the mother, and in a moment the little one would be picked up, kissed and fondled. Ugh! It is dreadful—this kissing habit—so unsanitary, so unhygienic and hazardous," continued Miss Creedon, her professional experience and scientific knowledge causing her to shudder at the thought of what the germs hidden in the kiss might do to one.

MISS SUSAN ARCHER.

MISS ANITA CHISHOLM.

"As I said, it is probably idle to talk to grown-up persons on this matter, but I thoroughly believe that children should be taught the dangers that lurk in kissing, before they acquire the habit. No child should ever be kissed. Kissing the hand is a pretty custom, but even that has its dangers, though not so evident as kissing on the mouth.

"Typhoid, for instance, is extremely contagious, but only under certain conditions. Typhoid affects the alimentary canal directly—it is a diseased condition of this portion of the human anatomy. For anyone to kiss the lips of a person even slightly affected by typhoid would almost inevitably result in contracting the disease immediately. That would be taking the germs into the system by direct contact. I would prefer not to comment on the case of the unfortunate young woman who recently died here after having nursed a young child that she had kissed while the little patient was suffering from typhoid.

If mothers knew the danger to which they subject their children when they permit them to be kissed indiscriminately, they would assuredly warn their children against the terrible risk. Even though the mature persons be in apparent good health, that does not guarantee immunity. The adult, having a greater amount of resisting power, might be suffering from some incipient form of germ disease which the child, with its diminished vitality, would become a prey to. I have no doubt of it—children have often become victims of a germ disease through the kissing habit, and then mothers wonder how their children could ever have been subjected to such sources of contamination."

Miss Anita Chisholm, a well-known Oakland nurse and a graduate of Bellevue, New York, smiled quizzically when asked to express an opinion regarding the germ theory as applied to kissing.

"Why, don't you get the opinion of the physicians? We nurses cannot be expected to pass opinion on a matter that has been discussed by learned scientists," she jeeringly replied. Miss Chisholm, evidently attempting to parry with the serious side of a subject that appealed to her in another light.

"Kissing? What is the professional attitude on this subject from the point of view of the nurse?" came in tantalizing banter from the young woman. The girl beamed with the mere gladness of being young, and laughed at the mere idea of associating kissing with anything scientific and professional.

"Oh, if you mean about the danger of contagion from kissing, why that is a different matter. Yes, I presume that many persons have become affected by kissing. I think history records such consequences. Oh, you refer to the hygienic consequences?" she repeated, the quizzical mockery leaving her smiling face as she dropped into the dignified professional attitude.

Counterfeits.

Read what one of the GREATEST NEWSPAPERS IN AMERICA has to say on this subject:

"The manufacturers of Castoria have been compelled to spend hundreds of thousands of dollars to familiarize the public with the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher. This has been necessitated by reason of pirates counterfeiting the Castoria trademark. This counterfeiting is a crime not only against the proprietors of Castoria, but against the growing generation. All persons should be careful to see that Castoria bears the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher, if they would guard the health of their children. Parents, and mothers in particular, ought to carefully examine the Castoria advertisements which have been appearing in this paper, and to remember that the wrapper of every bottle of genuine Castoria bears the fac-simile signature of Chas. H. Fletcher, under whose supervision it has been manufactured continuously for over thirty years.—Philadelphia Bulletin.

JUMPS TRAIN AND IS HURT

Man Thought He Was About to Be Kicked Off and Makes Leap.

Thinking that he was about to get a kick in the shins for jumping a Key Route train at Twenty-second and Chestnut streets yesterday afternoon, Charles Kirchner, 28 years of age, jumped off the moving train and fell headlong on the street. His right hand was badly bruised and one of the fingers dislocated, but otherwise he was not injured.

Kirchner is a hod carrier and resides at 1543 Adeline street. He says that he had the money to pay his fare for the ride of only a few blocks, but thought the ticket collector was going to give him a kick, which caused him to jump. His bruises were treated at the Receiving Hospital by Dr. Irwin.

JAPANESE RUSH INTO CANADA

British Columbia Becomes the Mecca of the "Little Brown" Men.

HONOLULU, H. T., April 27.—Japanese have hit on to a new scheme to reach the mainland from the Hawaiian Islands. Those who have already reached San Francisco and other coast ports are sending back their passports to their countrymen who are in Honolulu. In consequence of this arrangement the Japanese will, it is thought, be able to get to the mainland without difficulty and in defiance of the new immigration measures enacted by Congress. There are still many Japanese in these islands anxious of reaching the United States' mainland and they are ready to attempt any subterfuge that presents itself.

NEW BISHOP A SCION OF ROYALTY.

The handsome and aristocratic looking Father Sesnon will no longer be the swell of the Roman Catholic Church in California, for the new bishop who succeeds the late Archbishop Montgomery is a scion of royalty itself, being the uncle of the King of Portugal. Judging by the way Santa Barbara society tumbled over itself to lionize that courtly monk who has been lecturing down there, local society, which is a shade less exclusive than that of the Channel City, will try to monopolize the clerical prince who has come among us. Smart brides intent on having ultra smart weddings will have the opportunity of their lives. They may not only succeed in having the scholarly and dignified Archbishop Riordan perform the ceremony but may induce the mitred uncle of a reigning king to assist in the ceremony. Such a prospect would be enough to tempt a Puritan maiden, Pussilla of the smart set, to turn proselyte—that is if the smart set be speckled by any Puritan Priscillas. However that may be, it is a foregone conclusion that there will be keen rivalry for the distinction of being the first in San Francisco to have a royal prince officiate in sacerdotal robes at a wedding.—Wasp

BATHSHEBA IN PALO ALTO.

Dear co-eds, why seek ye so quickly to quarrel
About a poor poem that's lacking a moral?
Why is all this flutter and fury and fuming?
About an old king and a bold army woman?
You've frequently read without showing disdain, oh,
Of scandals like that, right here at Valjejo.
Of course, it was wrong, when the king saw Bathsheba,
To wigwag his hand and say, "Come, meine liebe."
Especially, knowing the dame had a hubby,
The best we can say is, Dave's actions were scrubbly
But why put the hemlock of scorn in the cup
Of the brave Stanford bard who showed Israel's hard up?
If you say unto Herron, "We'll none of your gravy,"
It seems that your sympathy must be with Davie.

GALLAGHER DID NOT PRAY.

Napa has the honor of receiving the Natives this year, but one great feature of the annual Grand Parlor which no doubt the little town that made the mineral water—or was it the other way round?—would appreciate as much as any, was unfortunately lacking to the first day of the convention. For Holy Jim Gallagher was not on hand to open the session with prayer. So to do is his duty as junior past grand president of the order, but this year, with a sensitive feeling for the fitness of things never credited to him before, Jim absented himself and the prayer was intoned by another. To hear Jim pray were a treat indeed, especially to those of us who saw him, in the days before Heney and the grand jury, assume a psalm-singing attitude in the supervisory chamber and prepare to chant, not the hymn of the day, but the praises of the United Railroads or some other favored corporation. They say Jim Gallagher was one of the most impressive prayers the Native Sons have ever known. But alas those who never had the honor of bowing their heads while he implored a benediction from on high, must rest content with a second-hand appreciation of his proficiency in this regard. For it looks as though the order is determined to get rid of Jim and that all his fervent prayers at grand parlors and elsewhere will not avail to save him.—Town Talk.

CAUTIOUS EASTERN FINANCIERS.

The Eastern financiers who are in town examining the affairs of the United Railroads Company have not found local conditions prepossessing. Indeed they have found them far from inviting. They have received the same impression that other visitors with money to invest have received—an impression of commercial instability and of a parlous outlook due to the imperious greed of organized labor. There is no great flood of Eastern money pouring into this city at present. The Eastern capitalist with money to invest has assumed the characteristic attitude of the man from Missouri, and local financial interests are getting sicklied o'er with the pale cast of anxiety. It is considered the height of impropriety to discuss such matters but I have always had a prejudice against emulating the ostrich after the manner of our merchants at the Fairmont banquet when they felicitated themselves on the gallant chin fight being made against the unspeakable employers of labor and owners of public utilities who shamefully corrupted the humble representatives of labor in public office, and said nothing on the subject that most concerns them, nothing of the source of their worst misgivings—the tyranny of labor.—Town Talk

THERE WERE THIRTEEN AT TABLE.

Members of the legal profession are not usually inclined to superstition and yet not a few of our local barristers have admitted themselves deeply impressed by a story that is going the rounds in connection with the untimely demise of "Billy" Alford. On New Year's eve Alford attended a party in this city to which fourteen guests had been bidden. At midnight when those who had gathered to celebrate the birth of another twelve-month seated themselves at table to hail the newborn child of the ages with meat and drink it was noticed that just thirteen chairs were drawn up. Laughing allusion was made on all sides to the ill-luck in store for one of their number during the new year and then nearly every one forgot the incident. Not so with "Billy" Alford's sister, who was there with her brother. She was visibly affected by the discovery and her spirits were gloomed for the rest of the evening. And now her brother is dead, stricken with awful suddenness. Haps such as these cannot be explained satisfactorily to those upon whom omens make a deep impression; and though the story is being told as illustrative of the curious coincidences with which life abounds, there is often to be discerned a deeper and more sombre feeling which the narrator tries to conceal, lest he be accused of superstitious leanings.—Town Talk.

CALHOUN UNFRIGHTENED.

I am not advised as to why Patrick Calhoun and the men whom he represents are disposed to sell the traction system of this city, but I think it somewhat significant in view of the fact that running railroads is their business and that they are not negotiating for the sale of their several Eastern systems. But I should not be surprised to learn that they were eager to be relieved of their anxieties. Perhaps it will be said that on account of the circumstances attending the grant of the trolley privilege they deem it advisable to get the franchise into the hands of innocent third parties. Perhaps it will be said that they are only bluffing, that they have no intention of selling so lucrative a property but hope to create the impression that it is not such a good thing as it seems. It would be interesting to penetrate their motives and designs, but the curious will have to wait for developments. Pat Calhoun is not the most communicative of men; nor, by the way, is it easy to throw him into a state of panic. Not even the awful prospect of facing Francis Heney before the Grand Jury inspires him with terror. I am told that he is entirely unimpaired of the precariousness of his position, seeming to be quite sure of impossibility of establishing the criminality of his conduct. I am also told that his sentiments respecting the nature of his relations with our city officials are shared by the greatest lawyers in the country. It has been suggested by one of them that if the crime in the French restaurant cases was extortion why should it be something else in the case of Calhoun's trolley franchise. And the same lawyer suggests that the difference might arise from the circumstance that the waiters' union is not as strong as the carmen's union. But this lawyer is a scoffer who wishes us to believe that Heney has been so generous with his immunity bath, so eager to conciliate union labor sentiment, that he is in imminent danger of achieving a fiasco. But my faith in Heney is still strong; also in Langdon who has promised faithfully not to run for Governor until after the people select him for District Attorney a second time.—Town Talk

THE LEASE OF THE FAIRMONT.

Those few financiers who have been in touch with the inside negotiations regarding the lease of the Fairmont Hotel think that the Laws contrived a handsome deal for themselves. The rental of $105,000 for ten years, covering taxes and insurance, guarantees them a good interest on their investment and the sale of the furniture on hand and that already contracted for will furnish them with approximately $450,000 ready cash. An option of renewal clause gives the Palace people the opportunity to continue the lease for another ten years at a rental of $10,000 a month, with taxes and insurance additional. A fair proposition all round, according to real estate experts. By the terms of agreement the Laws will rush the completion of the 600 rooms on the upper floors and turn them over to the new management as rapidly as possible.—Town Talk.

TURNED GAPING WALLS INTO A GREAT HOTEL.

The Laws acquired the place, a gaping, uncompleted structure, at a time when nearly every one regarded it as a colossal business mistake on the part of the Oelrichs family. Hotel people one and all declined tempting lease inducements and the property seemed doomed to become a monument of disappointed hopes when the famous trade was made and the Laws took hold of it with their indomitable energy and began the tremendous task of rushing it to completion. The great fire did not for a moment check their ardor. Before the ashes were cold they had let new contracts to replace the million-dollar loss they had sustained. Despite the almost prohibitive rise in certain lines of building material, the lost time in freight congestion, the labor troubles and the thousand and one ills and disappointments which beset a building of that size under the present confusing local conditions they stuck grimly to their task. They had every idea of completing it as the most magnificent hotel in the country when the Palace people, forced by their utter lack of proper hotel facilities, came forward and made them the tempting offers which led to the signing of the present lease.

THE PET AMBITION OF THE LAWS.

The Fairmont has always been something more than a mere hotel with the Laws. It has been a sentiment. They designed to make it the great pride of San Francisco and a monument to the spirit of the New West. The Palace people knew this and argued along the lines that the Laws were past masters as constructors and had very creditably carried the Fairmont through one period of its existence but now came the period when consummate hotel management to conduct it on superior lines was absolutely necessary. They pointed to their own world-wide reputation acquired through thirty-five years of exceptional experience and guaranteed to make the name of the Fairmont as great in the hotel world as the Laws could wish. So it is that the men who virtually constructed the great edifice leased it to the very best managers to be had. They still own it and will strive to make it what they always intended: the pride of San Francisco.—Town Talk.

THE CASSERLYS HAVE DESERTED US.

Mrs Jack Casserly has deserted San Francisco for good and all, I hear. She has not yet made up her mind whether she will make her future home in New York, Chicago or Washington. Mrs. Casserly is fond of the higher Bohemian set, and likes to be surrounded with great musicians, actors and literary people. She would like to have had a salon in San Francisco but she thought this town too small to get a very distinguished circle about her. In New York she sees a great deal of the Walter Damrosch's, Emma Eames-Story, Bessie Abbott, Margaret Anglin and Henry Miller.—Town Talk.

THE TALE OF A COAT

At least one of the evening coats lost in the scuffle at the Promenade Concert which was given at the Fairmont Hotel has been recovered by its fair owner, though not without the exercise of strategy. The night of the concert the ladies managed the hat and cloak rooms and by midnight it was just one big grab bag with a bit or miss chance of getting the wraps in which you started for the affair. A society woman who wore a beautiful coat of apricot colored cloth trimmed with real Irish lace and all the other "fixings" that go to make an evening coat a thing of beauty had to go home without any wrap, as no amount of search unraveled hers from the tangle of silk and cloth and velvet. Although she advertised her loss in the papers the coat did not put in an appearance and she decided that the person who had taken it meant to keep it. On Monday night of this week she attended the opening performance of Luciano Russell, and fancy her surprise and indignation when she saw a woman come sailing down the aisle in her coat. Her husband had to restrain her from rushing up to the woman and then there divesting her of the costly garment. Instead he quietly dispatched an usher with a note to her telling her to leave the coat after the first act at a box office for Mrs. So and So or she would immediately be arrested. He stationed himself at the door to apprehend the woman in case she tried to escape but she acted as one who might have felt that she was entirely innocent of criminal intention. She slipped into the coat after the first act and left it at the box office, where the rightful owner claimed it after the play. And now those in the secret are wondering how it all happened, and if possibly it was not all a most unfortunate mistake.—Town Talk.

THE GREENWAY PARTY.

The Greenway dinner party did not run on ball bearings owing to the delayed appearance of half the guests. Mrs Fred McNear, with pretty Mary Keeney, arrived first and helped upholster the foyer until the last stragglers had found their places at the tables. Greenway, usually most placid and polished of hosts was jolted out of his chronic calm and kept the telephone buzzing. Finally he darted out into the night to round up the derelects. Mrs. McNear and Miss Keeney grew tired of decorating the foyer and they had the steward show them to the table reserved for Mr. Greenway. Of course, these two women sitting at the big, round, flower laden table reserved for eight, came in for abnormal attention. Mrs. McNear wore rather a demure white lace gown, with a huge white hat topped with nodding black plumes. The chapeau was worn well off her face—a distinctly new angle in recent millinery. Both Mrs. McNear and her pretty young companion looked duly relieved when the smiling Ned finally appeared with the rest of the party whom he had rescued from a tangle of automobiles.—Town Talk.

A VANDERBILT CROWDED OUT.

An interested observer of Western festivities was Miss Gladys Vanderbilt. The Vanderbilt party arrived during the after dinner promenade and unobtrusively hurried to their apartments but in passing through the foyer they almost brushed sleeves with Mrs. Walter Martin who was with the Herbert Moffatts. Evidently Mrs. Walter has not a nodding acquaintance with the Cornelius Vanderbilts who are said to be very friendly with Mrs. Peter Martin. Miss Gladys did not disappear like the rest of the party but sat down on the mezzanine floor and smilingly watched the rainbow tined crowd below. She was evidently having a snug, lovely time all by herself—probably for the first time in her life viewing such a scene instead of being on view herself. She was routed out of her corner by a newly rich matron who, with a friend, made her perfume way to the mezzanine floor and finding a severely tailored young woman occupying the one available seat, said in an arily disdainful way, "Kindly move along so that we can sit down." The daughter of Cornelius Vanderbilt "moved along" and as she turned into a corridor the San Francisco woman spread her silken skirts on the settee and drawled "I suppose she is the wife or sister of some employe come to 'rubber' at the crowd." And I, who had watched the scene from a shadowy corner wondered at the mistake of a woman who could not see Newport and New York written large in Miss Vanderbilt's manner and tailor-made.—Town Talk.

GRAFT ISSUE.

There are some influential men in Oakland who, since the talk of graft investigations as to certain transactions in their city, have been living on the shady side of Uneasy street, where horrible fancies haunt their gloomy bed-chambers, and in the long and silent watches of the night the ominous clanging of steel-barred doors sounds uncomfortably near.

THE FERRY PHILOSOPHER.

It is not an uncommon sight to see on the ferryboats a bare-headed man whose hat has been blown overboard by the strong breezes. But to be as I was, not only hatless but coatless, with a cravat loosely knotted around a collarless neck, was embarrassing. It was an awful situation for a respectable commuter who had hitherto never gone aboard a ferry boat without having on him full equipment of clothing. I racked my brain in an effort to find out how it happened. The last thing I remembered was that after breakfast I had sat down to write some of my philosophy. Sometimes the writing of this department induces a sort of cataleptic fit—which statement may explain many things to my readers.

So, when I arrived at the realization that I was aboard the boat in such outre costume, I concluded that catalepsy was responsible. But this did not in any way abate the extreme embarrassment of the situation. It was terrible. The only thing to do was to remain in an obscure corner, slip quietly ashore when the boat landed, and, hurrying to the nearest store, buy what was necessary to make me look and feel normal.

But that plan was balked. I felt in my pockets, and the only thing of value that I could find was my commutation ticket. I would have to go directly back home. The anticipation was not pleasant. I imagined the trip back on the boat and train, and the walk through the streets to my house, gazed at by the neighbors, who had always been suspicious of me, and who would now feel sure that I was crazy.

Leaving the future out of the question, the immediate present was bad enough. I had dozens of acquaintances on the boat, and if any of them should chance to see me there would be a sensation and a scene. Luckily, no one recognized me, as I hung to an obscure corner. Then—nothing worse could have happened. Along came two sisters, one of whom was to me the only girl who existed. Out of the corner of the eye I watched them. They came in my direction, then hesitated. They started toward me again, then half turned away as if to go to another part of the boat. Then they came directly towards me and sat opposite me. I ducked my head lower than before, and tried to be invisible. I remained in that attitude for several minutes, and would have been all right had I maintained my position. But the temptation to take a peek and see if they were looking at me was too strong. I raised my head a trifle and caught the eye of the one for whose opinion I cared. She saw me, and looked bewildered. She recognized me, and—

Just then the boat bumped against the slip on the San Francisco side, and I awoke, full clothed and immensely relieved.—John Bohunkas.

It was very lucky for Speaker Cannon when he returned from his foreign trip that he could answer every question concerning Roosevelt and Harriman with "Yes, thank you, I had a fine trip."

The New York police officers who accused a chauffeur of driving his machine at a speed of a mile in ten seconds will probably get an offer of a job in the advertising department of some motor company.

GRAFT ISSUE.

There are some influential men in Oakland who, since the talk of graft investigations as to certain transactions in their city, have been living on the shady side of Uneasy street, where horrible fancies haunt their gloomy bed-chambers, and in the long and silent watches of the night the ominous clanging of steel-barred doors sounds uncomfortably near.

It would seem, however, that their fears are groundless. Heney is seriously engaged in the graft war in San Francisco, and unfortunately in Alameda county, as has always been the case, those who should force matters to an issue are peacefully "asleep at the switch." But the optimistic ones are still with us, thank the Lord, and are fervently singing, "There'll Come a Time Some Day." Yet there are those who cannot help shouting that old refrain, "Oh, Let It Be Soon."

It took a young man of Palo Alto to design a jilted lover's revenge. The gentleman was recently thrown over by a San Francisco belle, who married a city fellow with more money. After the marriage, the lady in question wrote to her old lover and requested the return of her photograph. By telegraph, the young man answered: "Picture burned long ago. Did not save the ashes." And there is a young matron who is doing a lot of thinking these days.

There is a heart-ache in the following poem, written by a small boy in one of the lower grades of a Palo Alto school—a lad who has had little opportunity to play and enjoy the good things of life, whose appearance bespeaks no poetical nature.

"I would like to spend my lonely hours,

Off in the woods among the flowers.

Get up early and go away,

E'en before the break of day;

And go amidst Nature's park,

Amid the chirps of the meadow lark.

And hear the squirrel run and the robin sing.

You go there and you hear a flutter of wing,

You see them fly, hear farewell song;

They sing and sing the whole day long."

OAKLAND WOMAN.

An Oakland woman, whose husband is a special policeman at one of the cheap theatres in that city, gave her spouse a horse-whipping the other night in the presence of a large number of spectators. Without speaking as to the merits of this particular case, there are those who suggest that if the parents of the silly girls who frequent these cheap resorts would use the same means of chastisement every time their offsprings were found entering them, they might be spared a large share of the sorrow that they are later brought to bear because of the acts of their daughters, who, in these cases are finally more to be pitied than condemned.—News Letter.

A boy was sent to the reform school at Whittier the other day from Riverside county because he was troublesome to his guardians, and they did not want to be bothered with him, and there was nowhere else to send him. It is a severe commentary on this State that the only home it provides for homeless boys is in a prison.

"What do you think?" remarked one commuter to another the other morning on the boat. "I was passing a Chinese washhouse one day last week and was surprised to hear the Mongolian proprietor singing. What astonished me most was that he was not singing one of those tuneless things so dear to the Oriental heart, but was actually humming an air from some opera. For a time I could not recall its title, and then it struck me like a flash. What do you think it was?" "Oh," answered his friend, "I suppose it was something from the Mikado—something about 'making the punishment fit the crime,' probably." "That's where you overlooked your hand," was the reply. "It was a solo from the 'Bohemian Girl'—Then You'll Remember Me." Oh, I tell you the heathen Chinese is a real fellow after all—that is, when white laundry workers are so foolish as to go on a strike."

BOY FALLS 50 FEET; UNHURT

Drops From Ship's Rigging to Hold and Lights on Oakum Pile.

One of the most miraculous happenings that ever befell an adventurous youth fell to the lot of 13-year-old Harold Morris, a little schoolboy from Stockton, who is now visiting his aunt, Mrs. Jacobs, on Santa Clara avenue, Alameda. Young Morris and his little cousin, Sammie Jacobs, about the same age, were climbing in the rigging of an ill ship lying on the mudflats of the estuary, when before either boy realized what was happening Harold lost his footing and fell from the mainmast to the deck and then down into the hold of the vessel. His little cousin nearly fell down the rope ladder to get to the side of his playmate, fearing that he was killed. When Sammie reached the bottom of the boat he found his cousin holding back tears, but at the same time, painfully suffering from a sore shoulder.

He hardly murmured as he stood up and found he was able to walk. The watchman had been attracted by the movements of the youngsters and came running to the deck to learn what the trouble was all about. He scolded them for coming aboard and advised young Jacobs to take the other to the Receiving Hospital, which was done. The pair reached the hospital, where it was found that Morris only sustained a slight abrasion upon the right shoulder and right cheek. Warden Page treated him and let him go home.

FISH MARKET WILL REMAIN

Billingsgate Not to Lose Renowned and Distinctive Feature.

tory to find the absurd project for moving the great fish market from Billingsgate to Shadwell has been abandoned. But it is said great improvements in the present market and its approaches will be made. These were required long ago, and if they are the result of the proposal for removal, the agitation has certainly not been in vain. Some wonder whether it will include the favorite scheme—the construction of a riverian promenade below bridge. If something could be done in the way of embanking the wharves between London Bridge and Billingsgate, if the same thing could be accomplished between Custom House Quay and the Tower Wharf, London should have a fine riverside walk from London Bridge to the Tower Bridge. Many fear such a vast improvement as this is hardly likely to be accomplished, but nevertheless, since the trust the city will not be lost sight of by those in charge of the improvements in this particular quarter.

PUGILIST'S RELATIVE IS PAINFULLY HURT

Abe Attell, 24 years old, living at 1137 Turk street, San Francisco, cousin of the prizefighter by the same name, was taken to the Receiving Hospital yesterday afternoon with a painful cut hand. The pugilist's relative is a fixture hanger and while working on a turning lathe sustained a severe gash of the right hand. At the hospital Dr. Bell dressed the wound, but the record says that Attell refused to have the wound properly treated.

YOUNG GIRL TO BE ARRAIGNED

Miss Grace Eaton, Sweetheart of Percy Pembroke, Will Appear in Court.

Miss Grace Eaton, the young woman who is engaged to marry Percy Pembroke, the youth under sentence to ten years' imprisonment at San Quentin for robbery, will be arraigned in department five of the Superior Court before Judge Melvin tomorrow at 10 o'clock. Miss Eaton was held over from justice of the peace court on the charge of perjury, preferred against her by the district attorney because she is said to have falsely testified on the witness stand when her sweetheart was being tried for the robbery of Edward Stanley.

Miss Eaton told of an alleged interview with Sheriff Barnett last year between Christmas and New Year at the corner of Eighth and Fallon streets, in which she said the official attempted to poison her regard for Pembroke. Sheriff Barnett denied the allegation and when Miss Eaton told the story on the stand she was taken out of the courtroom at the order of District Attorney Brown and locked in the County Jail for two days until she obtained a release on $2000 bonds. Miss Eaton will be represented tomorrow morning by Attorney George J. McDonough.

Our PELVIC METHODS, in nearly every case we treat, insure men a lifelong cure if they are afflicted with either:

BLOOD POISON, SKIN DISEASES, SORES, ULCERS, STRICTURE, VARICOCELE, HYDROCELE, NERVOUS DECLINE, WEAKNESS OF MEN, PILES, FISTULA OR CHRONIC DISEASES OF THE KIDNEY, BLADDER AND PROSTATE.

We fulfill every promise. We hold out no false hopes.

The Cured, Satisfied Patients

We dismiss, who, before coming to us, had almost become physical, and financial bankrupts in doctoring with physicians and specialists; are the best references we can give of our reliability and the evidence we offer to prove that our PELVIC methods are superior to others. The sufferers that come to us from friends of theirs, who have dealt with us, and recommend our treatment, support the statement we make that we deal fairly with every one. Thousands of men recognize our skill in curing the diseases that come under our specialty, and know that we have the ability to cure them when others would likely fail to even bend.

Some may imagine that our charges are beyond their reach, and they go to some self-styled specialist, who does not cure them, but charges much more than we do. Remember this: We do not want any man to feel that he is unable to pay us, as we arrange our terms in payments to suit.

PAY AT YOUR CONVENIENCE

Our charges are very liberal, and our terms most just. Do not treat elsewhere until you have investigated our methods and terms. We are sure you can arrange with us as is most easy for you to do.

WE CURE MEN

Our cure for men makes the nerves strong and steady, enriches the blood, invigorates the system, and most important of all, restores the powers. Avoid temporary stimulants, and seek a lasting cure. If you have violated the laws of health and are conscious of a constant drain on your powers, which is undermining your system and weakening your vitality, come to us before you become a nervous and physical wreck. If you are weak, gloomy and depressed, lack ambition and energy, unable to concentrate your thoughts, lack vim, vigor, and vitality, CALL AT ONCE. Our treatment will overcome all weakness, and restore you to the normal condition of health and perfect strength.

DISCOURAGED AND DISAPPOINTED MEN

We want every man who is distressed by the discovery that he has contracted some special private disease, or who is suffering from the advanced stages of that disease, to call upon us, and allow us to see if we can not offer some relief. # The Passing of Drugs

People are losing faith in doctors and drugs. It's a good sign. It shows that they have discovered that drugging is as harmful as disease, and that Nature's method of treating disease and chronic disorders is the right way.

You know that the old system of drugging for every pain or ailment has been in use for thousands of years. It is so old that it is out of place in this day of progress. You would never be sick or suffer from any kind of ailment if you would only obey Nature's laws and not work against them.

It has been proven that the human body is electrical and that the stomach generates this power for the support of the body and itself.

When you dope your stomach with drugs you are not only hurting it, but you are working against Nature. Drugs destroy the digestive juices of the stomach, consequently you do not get the proper nutrition from your food. It is the action of these juices upon your food that produces the human electricity. So, can't you see that as long as you fill your stomach with poisonous drugs it cannot generate this force?

When your stomach, liver or digestive organs get out of order it is because they lack the necessary electricity to enable them to perform their regular functions. The breaking down of one of these organs nearly always causes other trouble. Nature can't cure them, because your body hasn't enough electricity to do the work, so you must assist Nature by restoring this electricity where it is needed.

My Electro-Vigor does this while you sleep. It saturates the nerves with its glowing power, and these conduct the force to every organ and tissue of your body, restoring health and giving strength to every part that is weak.

Electro-Vigor is a relief from the old system of drugging. It does by natural means what you expect drugs to do by unnatural means. It removes the cause of disease, and after the cause has been removed Nature will do the rest.

Electro-Vigor is not an electric bolt. It is a dry-cell body battery, and makes its own power.

Since using your Electro-Vigor I am wonderfully improved in health. My heart is strong, my back is strong, and I am not bothered with nervousness.

Murphy's, Cal.

W. M. H. CARLEY,

When I began my treatment I was suffering from a bad case of indigestion and stomach trouble. I had little hope of getting a cure for this trouble, which refused to yield to drugs. Two months' use of Electro-Vigor accomplished a complete cure, and I have since put it aside.

It is a pleasure for me to recommend Electro-Vigor.

Don't Buy Stock

Unless you thoroughly investigate the company.

The Model

Manufacturing and Investment Company presents one of the safest and most conservative investments in Oakland, having all the earmarks of a genuine success.

The Company owns one of the best located pieces of business property near San Pablo avenue, and it proposes to erect on this site a handsome three-story Mission style building. The first two floors will be used by the Company for a MODEL Garage and Machine Shop, and will also handle all kinds of Automobile supplies. It is purposed to fit up the third floor as a MODEL Automobile Club Room.

The location forms a MODEL site for the purpose intended, having three street frontages of approximately 100 feet each, which will give a floor space of about 30,000 feet.Ⓜ

This should especially interest owners of Automobiles, as auto-factory concessions will be made to such investors on their repair work and supplies.

The Company was incorporated April 15, 1907, with a capital stock of $75,000, divided into 750 shares of $100 each.

Our motto is

DOLLAR FOR DOLLAR

So there is no promotion stock. The Company has placed 500 shares on the market, and one-half of this amount has already been subscribed, so we expect it will be over-subscribed in the next two or four weeks. It will, therefore, be necessary for intending investors to lose no time in investigating one of the best co-operative propositions ever placed upon the market for public subscription.

Here is a MODEL investment, which combines all the prime features essential to success, and resulting profits which determine dividends. NOW, act quick, not today, and either call at our office or send for prospectus.

Emma Eames Husband Protects Innocent Woman

SNAPS FINGERS AT THE COURT

Will Marry Again When It Pleases Him and He Gets Ready.

PHILADELPHIA, April 27.—Julian Story, artist and divorced husband of Cantatrice Emma Eames, returned late tonight to that same suite at the St. James Hotel where in bitter anger his famous wife had parted from him on the night of the famous ball last spring as she had heard the story of his devotion to a beautiful Philadelphia debutante.

"It is all over," he said with a shrug of his shoulders. "I am very sorry. Madame Eames was wrong. She was not injured. I give my word of honor that never in act was she injured. I am a gentleman. She did not understand. That is all. I am sorry."

"I cannot tell you of the proceedings before Referee Mr. Buck. I was not there. It was not possible for me to be there. I had agreed not to contest the suit of Madame Eames if she mentioned no names. I did not fear for myself, you understand, but I could not have any innocent woman brought into this terrible affair."

"Madame Eames is a great artist. Madame Eames is a genius. Madame Eames has imagination in the superlative degree. Faced with all these attributes of genius, what is a poor gentleman with the reputation of innocent ladies to consider to do? Nothing but keep quiet. Therefore I kept quiet and Madame Eames is free once again."

"Had it not been that the reputation of innocent women would have suffered, I assure you that I would not have kept quiet. Never, never, no, never. I would have fought this thing to the utmost."

"What a sentence; what a penalty! Consider it—Madame Eames may do as she pleases, but I must live in single blessedness until death comes to her. Is it not grotesque? Have I no heart; can love be bidden, called this way or that? Be told to stay or to go? What nonsense! It is ridiculousness. Can a dry-as-dust reference of the abstract court of New York bid me never love again? And if I do love, what then? The foolish court in New York says it is illegal."

"Well, to the foolish New York court I snap my fingers. If I wish to marry again I will marry. I do not recognize the court. For me it has no existence. Nor will it save the woman who hereafter becomes my wife."

"My reasons? They are these: For the sake of innocent women, whom Madame Eames, in the frenzy of her imagination and artistic temperament, might have blackened before the world, I keep silent. Because of my silence she secured her divorce. If I could not as an honorable gentleman appear before the court and answer Madame Eames' charges, I cannot, in justice to myself, accept its decision so far as my future life is concerned. The point is perfectly clear to me. I will marry if I choose, marry whom I choose, and marry when or where I choose—the high court of New York and Madame Eames to the contrary notwithstanding. And that is all there is to it. Madame Eames is a lovely lady. I loved her dearly. I never wronged her. She chose, however, to listen to the malicious gossip of society snakes, to feed the lying tongue of social vipers and to believe that I was telling her the truth."

"I could not convince her. I could not, save by silence, save innocent women. Therefore I was silent, but I will not be crucified by any court. My own conscience applauded; it does not hurt me. Therefore all is well."

"Mr. Story would not say whether it was true that he intended to marry a certain beautiful Philadelphia debutante who went abroad this spring, and who, it is said, he intends to marry in France."

"The young woman in question, a member of one of the noblest and best of Philadelphia's families, had her portrait painted last winter a year ago, and it is said is the one whose name, mentioned by gossips to Madame Eames at the Story masked ball, resulted in the divorce. She went away with her mother suddenly this spring for a stay of two years."

"The young woman in question, a member of one of the noblest and best of Philadelphia's families, had her portrait painted last winter a year ago, and it is said is the one whose name, mentioned by gossips to Madame Eames at the Story masked ball, resulted in the divorce. She went away with her mother suddenly this spring for a stay of two years."

"What a sentence; what a penalty! Consider it—Madame Eames may do as she pleases, but I must live in single blessedness until death comes to her. Is it not grotesque? Have I no heart; can love be bidden, called this way or that? Be told to stay or to go? What nonsense! It is ridiculousness. Can a dry-as-dust reference of the abstract court of New York bid me never love again? And if I do love, what then? The foolish court in New York says it is illegal."

"Well, to the foolish New York court I snap my fingers. If I wish to marry again I will marry. I do not recognize the court. For me it has no existence. Nor will it save the woman who hereafter becomes my wife."

"PATIENCE," PRESENTED BY HIGH SCHOOL PUPILS, WILL BE SUCCESS

Young Singers Being Coached by Professor Charles Hildesley Have Production Well Under Way for Thursday Evening's Performance.

The pupils of Oakland High School now have things well under way for their production of "Patience," which is to take place at the Macdonough Theater next Thursday evening. The young actors are now being coached by Professor Charles Hildesley, of the Osborn Conservatory of Music. Mr. Hildesley has had wide experience in this line and is having great success with his pupils. The cast is extremely fortunate in having a splendid trio of males. George Leber, who plays the part of Governor, is sure to make a success. With a splendid baritone voice and extremely clever acting he takes off the part remarkably well.

Floyd Taylor, who plays the part of Bunthorne, has the leading male role. Taylor's voice is fitted to the part and he has shown remarkable talent and ability in handling his part under the able direction of C. W. Hildesley. The part of the Duke is to be played by John McMullen, one of the popular young men of Oakland's younger set. McMullen possesses an exceptionally pleasing tenor and the character of the Duke is admirably suited to him. The many friends of the young man await with interest his appearance.

INHUMANITY TO WOMEN

Sheriff Smith of Washington Arraigned by Seattle Humane Society.

SEATTLE, Wash., April 27.—The Seattle Humane Society, through its attorney, Thomas D. Page, has filed charges with Judge Morris of the Superior Court alleging that Sheriff Louis Smith subjects his female prisoners to inhuman treatment. Gross neglect of duty is set forth and the guards and turnkeys of the county jail are accused of the gravest crimes against the women confined in the institution. Judge Morris has as yet taken no action, though intimating his intention to bring the petition and charges regularly before the entire judiciary of the county, numbering six Superior Judges.

YOUNG CORBETT COMES TO LIFE

Boxes Young Erne a Six-Round Draw and Shows Old-Time Speed.

PHILADELPHIA, April 27.—Young Corbett and Young Erne fought a lively six-round draw at the National Athletic Club tonight, which in the opinion of the spectators was a draw. The first round was Erne's, he led repeatedly, and by sheer cleverness outpointed his opponent, but there was little steam behind his blows, and he did no damage. In the second round Corbett rallied and charged Erne all around the ring. Erne again appeared to advantage in the third, but the fourth was even, both men doing a good bit of dodging about. The fifth was characterized by vicious fighting, Corbett who seemed to be tired, fought repeatedly to cover himself by clinching and had to be warned repeatedly by the referee. The last round was even, both men being tired.

WALKOUT OF MEN IN ALASKA MINES

SEATTLE, April 27.—Day workers in the Tanana district walked out yesterday for an eight instead of a ten-hour day. Similar action on the part of gold diggers is daily expected at Nome, and several hundred men at the Ellamar and Latouche Island mines have been out for some weeks. Unrest on the part of mine workers is also manifest in the Juneau district.

The situation in the Tanana diggings is serious for sluicing has just been begun there with the running of spring water, and unless a settlement is reached without delay the gold output for the season will be materially lessened. Larger mine operators declare they will close down before conceding eight hours.

MAKES A DIFFERENCE

"Isn't it good going to take any vacation this year at all?" "No." "Why not?" "He took one last year."

"Yes, but he was on salary then, he's a member of the firm now."—Philadelphia Press.

LITTLE OR NOTHING IS DONE BY GRAND JURY

Heney Interrogates A. Brown of Los Angeles About Independent Telephone Methods, but Brown Knew Little.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 27.—The Grand Jury, which is probing into municipal corruption in this city, held a protracted meeting this afternoon, but accomplished little or nothing before adjournment but it decided to resume the consideration of a number of subjects next Tuesday at 2 o'clock P. M.

At one time there were about a dozen men waiting in the ante-room to be examined. They represented a number of the subjects which the jury had had under consideration for some time but the information which they were expected to impart was mainly to fit into vacant places in some of the stories already told to the inquisitors or to shed a little more light upon controverted points. There was a man named A. Brown from Los Angeles, who was supposed to know something about the independent telephone methods but he denied that he was able to give the jury any information along the line of the questions propounded.

LOUD TALK. While Brown was in the jury room the sound of voices pitched high above the conversational tone, reached the ears of the waiting newspapermen in the adjoining hall, and Brown was asked if one of the voices was his, rising in protest to the questions which the jury was propounding to him. Brown declared that the voice was not his but that of Assistant District Attorney Heney himself, who had become more than ordinarily interested in the line of examination which he was pursuing. Brown refused to state what was the subject which had so inspired the attorney in question.

NICKEL-IN-THE-SLOT. There were also present a few liquor dealers who had been subpoenaed for the purpose of giving information as to methods which had been employed by city officials in allowing them to run nickel-in-the-slot machines. They were not brought before the jury, however, but were told to be on hand when the body reassembled on Tuesday.

The greater number of the witnesses, however, were contractors of this city and they were expected to tell whether they had used improper methods in securing contracts for the performance of public work on which they have been engaged for some time.

All of them who were examined informed the jury that they owed the contracts which had been given to them, to the decision of the Board of Public Works and that, so far as they knew there had been no improper methods resorted to for the purpose of inducing that body to give them the work. Among these contractors were C. A. Warner, of the Warner Improvement Company; A. E. Burkman, John McDonald, of the Williams Paving Company; John Spargo, of the Golden Gate Contracting Company; L. Williamson, T. T. Tracy, of the Tracy & Flynn Contracting Company and C. T. Harney. The last-mentioned, however, was not called into the room but was notified to be on hand next Tuesday.

Tracy told the jury that he never had any dealings with the Board of Public Works which were not strictly proper. He said that his firm had done perhaps $25,000 worth of street repaving and that he thought the board in question ought to be grateful to the concern because the latter had given up its regular work for the purpose of expediting the putting of the streets in as good condition as possible and as soon as possible. A great deal of the firm's work was done in California, Davis and other streets in that vicinity.

Goodwin, the noted actor, got into a black jack game at Everett yesterday, missed his train and but for an enforced automobile run would not have been able to fill his engagement at Bellingham last night. Incidentally Goodwin dropped $500.

Luck ran against him and in the desperation of his play he took no note of the fleeing time. When it dawned upon him that he had tarried over the green cloth too long he hurriedly called an automobile and in a wild dash across country succeeded in catching the train at Sylvan station, proceeding on with his company to Bellingham.

This he failed to do. The contest has been ended by the heirs agreeing to deed the land to her and she has made some concessions.

SANTA ROSA, April 27.—What promised to be one of the most sensational legal contests ever tried here is off. This afternoon judgment of dismissal was entered in the suit brought by Mrs. Eva Gutermute, a daughter of the late C. S. Miller, wealthy pioneer of Petaluma, against the other heirs to the estate to get possession of the famous home place of the Millers near Petaluma. She claimed that her father had promised her the estate if she would remain with him to the time of his death, and he also promised to will it to her.

"HIS MASTER'S VOICE"

Have YOU Heard That Rigoletto Quartet Record?

The record where Caruso, Abbott, Homer and Scotti sing in Italian "Bella Figlia dell' Amore," from the third act of Verdi's "Rigoletto"?

This is the new record that is creating such a furore all over America. It is without a doubt the greatest reproduction ever achieved—nothing to equal it has ever been known in the history of talking machines.

San Francisco owners of talking machines have gone wild over this record—the blending of the voices is marvelous—every syllable, every note is brought out.

Dozens of people call every day to hear it—people with no intention of purchasing—simply lovers of good music, and they're welcome, too.

No owner of a talking machine can afford to be without this masterpiece of the Victor Co. It's even worth buying a machine just to play this one piece.

You MUST hear it, or, if you can't call, then order by mail—price $6—can be used on any disc-playing machine.

VICTOR TALKING MACHINES—STEINWAY PIANOS

BROADWAY AT 13TH, OAKLAND

1635 Van Ness, S. F.

Fifteen-year-old Hennie Ruth Burch, who is here shown, offers a most peculiar study in criminality. The girl who is a descendant of a Mohawk Indian chief, poisoned a child whom she was nursing and attempted suicide. The reason given for the crime was that she was about to be parted from her little charge and loved it so well she could not bear the separation. It is believed that she is insane.

EAR'S PRODUCTION OF CEMENT.

According to a statement issued by the Geological Survey, the total production of hydraulic cement in the United States in 1906 was 30,027,321 barrels, valued at $54,010,713. This represents an increase in both production and value of cement over the preceding year, the increase in production being 9,133,915 barrels and in value $18,001,524.

Of the total amount manufactured in the United States in 1906, 15,010,322 barrels were Portland cement, with a value of $51,340,652; natural rock cement 3,035,756 barrels, valued at $2,362,140, and 1,981 barrels of puzzolan cement, valued at $12,921.

THE PROPER CAPER.

A Rome correspondent tells of an all-night banquet (8 P. M. to 8 A. M.) given to a hundred guests by a Swiss commercial traveler who has won the Italian lottery prize of $40,000. They put away 278 bottles of champagne between them, which is at the rate of two bottles and three-quarters per man.—Pail Mail Gazette.

IRON PLANT FOR SEATTLE.

British investors are to erect at Seattle an iron and steel plant with the greatest and most diversified capacity of any similar works ever planned for the West, says the Seattle Times. The plant will occupy a tract of about seventy acres and the company to construct and operate the same will be capitalized at $8,000,000, of which amount $1,000,000 will be raised locally. The company will build both ships and railroad cars. The proposed graving dock will be 750 feet in length and 90 feet wide.

"Facial expression," said the thoughtful looking man, "is not confined to human beings by any means. For instance, some time ago I went to call on a friend of mine, who was not at home. However, a dog of his was there. I looked at the dog a moment, and he returned my look. Then something in that dog's face seemed to take hold of me and simply root me to the spot. It was his teeth."—Chicago News.

THE OUTDOOR LIFE

If a man or woman has a taste of independent initiative, if, for instance, they have had the courage at some time to seek out the home of the brook trout with the trials that often implies, they need have no fear of tent life. One must, of course, remember that in leaving town environments the luxuries are left behind. The tent house will not have decorated walls, the furnace will be a small, sheet iron stove, the electric light will be exchanged for an oil lamp and the dainty meals will be replaced by blander fare. But if these things and friends are more than the sweetest, most health giving air on earth, they should remain at home and die among their gods. In tent life, aided by horse or pony, a dog, books and perhaps a gun, it is surprising how quickly and pleasantly the #### days will pass.

Tents vary in size, usually 12x14 feet, but if one is fortunate enough to have a companion, three-room tents, from thirty to forty feet long by about fourteen feet wide, can be found. In this there will be only the bare necessities as to furnishings, and the appearance of the place will depend on taste and thoughtfulness in arranged fittings of one's own. A tent can be plain and barren or cozy and tasteful, according to one's desires.—Edward B. Elliott, in The World Today.

A BOY'S MEMORY.

A number of years back a burly Western Kansas man gave his nephew, a lad of fifteen years, an unmerited chastising. The boy promised his assaliant a like compliment when he became a man. Now you may think the boy forgot all about his words, uttered in the heat of a passion, but this wasn't that sort of a kid. The uncle was about his duties on the farm one day last winter when a husky six-footer came up and gave him a glorious thumping. It was the fifteen-year-old nephew, only he was six years older. Then the uncle sued for $1000 for personal injuries inflicted. An unsympathetic jury couldn't see it that way and he took the case to the Supreme Court. Last week that august body handed down a decision affirming the lower court's decision.—Smith County (Kan.) Pioneer.

FIGHT FANS WOULD LIKE TO BE SHOWN SOMETHING OF SQUIRE'S SKILL WITH GOOD TRIAL HORSE

Public Must Be Shown Now.

Anxious to See the Australian Hook Up With Some Good Second Rater.

By EDDIE SMITH.

Bill Squires, the heavyweight, still remains the chief topic of discussion among the sporting fraternity and considerable comment on his ability to cope with the Americans can be heard on every side. To be perfectly fair with the newcomer it must be said that he has everything that goes to make a successful fighter in the way of build and athletic training and a careful study of the various positions in which he has been photographed would indicate that the Antipodean really has a good idea of the boxing game. Of course, there are some good fighters that when posing for a picture stand in the most ridiculous positions and if one did not know that they could box or fight he would be inclined to believe that the fighter was a dud. Then, too, some of the worst fighters that we have had have been graceful men who in a picture looked very good, but there is something in the pose of Bill Squires that goes beyond the graceful limit.

BILL IS DETERMINED.

It is the determined expression that covers his face at all times when being photographed and the apparent ease with which he strikes an attitude that makes it possible for him to land a solid punch with either hand. He stands solid on the ball of both feet, with his toes pointed straight to the front, which allows an easy movement of the waist muscles, which is the essential point in fast exchanges of punches. His hands are held in such a position that it requires no pulling back of the arm when leading or countering on an opponent which indicates speed and the well-muscled back and shoulders are indications of hitting power. What more could a man expect in the way of physique to be a successful fighter? But with all this the question still remains is it fair to the public that supports the game to put Squires, even though he is the champion of his native land which for years had the reputation of being the incubator of athletes against the premier of the American heavyweights in lieu of the samples that his country has sent to this country during the past five years and with the knowledge that some of our second-raters have gone to Australia and cleaned everything they were pitted against.

WRITER'S OPINION

To my way of thinking it is not only bad policy for the club managers to do so, but also a bad business move for the Australian himself. If Squires meets the winner of the Burns-O'Brien contest and defeats him, then he will have a poor chance of getting on with any of the other heavies in this country and while he would clean up considerable money in touring the country with a show he would in the end lose money, for to my knowledge no fighter ever got rich following the show business. For the sake of argument we will suppose that he would match himself with Al Kaufmann, the California heavyweight. Wouldn't that be fair to the public? And if he won wouldn't it make his contest with the winner of the fight in the south a better paying investment for him?

Squires will be a big drawing card no matter who he is matched with. A contest between Bill and a fighter of Kaufmann's ability would be a good paying investment for any club manager. Squires has been in this country now since the 17th of this month and to my knowledge has not given anyone a line on his boxing ability. This continued mystery about his boxing is fast causing the boxing fans to loose confidence in him and unless he and Manager Reynolds change their tactics they will find that the press and public do not intend to witness another fiasco such as the Jeffries and Munroe fight was.

Mind you, I do not think that a match between he and one of our top notchers would be anything of the kind, for personally I am of the opinion that he will prove a good fighter but nevertheless the public must be protected and the only way that this can be done is to have the big fellow tried out with some heavyweight before a match is made between him and the winner of the Burns and O'Brien contest.

The winner of this contest will be recognized as the best of American heavyweights.

IS SCHRECK CHAMPION?

A Constant Reader writes and asks why I do not consider Mike Schreck, the legitimate champion of the world, barring Jeffries. The first and principal reason is that he is not considered such by any sporting authority in America and another for the reason that he has never done anything that would entitle him to that distinction.

Mike is a good fighter and one that none of the present day heavyweights care to hook up with. He is a Hurcules of strength and game as the proverbial pebble, has some speed and can hit fairly hard. He is of the aggressive type of boxer and is always coming at an opponent like a bull at a red flag. He lacks the class that goes with champions, however, and as he is such a tough fellow to beat the fighters feeling that there is so little credit attached to a win over him and no great

AUSTRALIAN SCRAPPER IMPRESSES EXPERT W. W. NAUGHTON AS BEING HARD-HITTER AND WILLING MIXER

Appears to Be Fast on His Feet.

Has the Step and Glide of a Man of Great Agility.

By W. W. NAUGHTON.

This Bill Squires affair has a humorous side to it. The Australian is in the full swing of preparation over at Shannon's resort, near San Rafael, and yet has no particular match date in view.

He is training against time, as it were. He is trying out the California climate, and if it treats him kindly he may be able to inform the promoters within a week or two how soon he will consider it safe to accept his first ring engagement.

So far as can be judged, Squires isn't worrying about public opinion or percentage or purses or anything in that line. His first care, apparently, is to be sure that Bill Squires in California is as formidable as Bill Squires in Australia. He doesn't care how many holidays or how many chances of big gates may pass. He wants to feel that he is all there, and then he will be content to take things as they come.

A BAD SUGGESTION.

It has been suggested that, as Squires is such a thoroughly unknown quantity, he should submit to a trying out before asking the public to purchase tickets for his first engagement. It has been instanced that most of the Australian fighters who come here were tested before being placed in the ring.

W. W. NAUGHTON

The fact that most of the Australian fighters came here unheralded is lost sight of. They landed here without any particular recommendation, and they had to submit to the trying-out process to prove that they were worthy of engagements.

Squires is endorsed by the Australian sporting press as the undisputed champion of that fat country. He has for a backer one of the wealthiest sporting men in the Antipodes, and he traveled to this country in style befitting an acknowledged champion.

MONEY TALKS.

Before he was many hours ashore he plunked down $5000 and challenged the winner of the Burns-O'Brien fight, the nearest thing to a world's championship contest at sight at present. Barney Reynolds, his manager, made it clear that his money is meant for a wager. There is no stipulation that if Burns or O'Brien is favorite over Squires the money forwarded by Bookmaker Wren is to receive the benefit of prevailing odds.

The $5000 held by the Examiner is a side bet that Squires will defeat the winner of the Burns-O'Brien fight. It is up to bet dollar against dollar, and on the score that money talks it is conclusive proof that the Australians think they are sending us a pretty good ringman.

All things considered, it looks as though Squires can scoff at the proposition that he consent to be tried-out—at least until his $5000 are covered.

SQUIRES A STRANGER.

Squires is as much of a stranger to the writer as he is to the other American pressmen, who met him on his arrival and have seen him at work since, but I am free to confess that he has impressed me favorably. He has the regulation "scrapper's" dial, to wit, the square jaw, the deer-

SITUATION IN FRISCO. The pugilistic situation in San Francisco is still enshrouded in fog, and so far as can be learned the Supervisors are in no hurry to ladle out permits. Some people say that six months may go by before a twenty-round match is arranged in that city.

In the meantime there will be plenty of stir at Colma, according to reports. Jimmy Coffroth is the sole trader in that region, and he is going right ahead with the erection of a daylight arena in which he intends to pull off important events on holidays and Saturday afternoons.

Coffroth sees numbers of good matches in sight now. He wants to bring Squires and the O'Brien-Burns winner together on May 30 (Decoration day), and if anything goes wrong on that attraction he will fall back on either Jimmy Britt and George Memsie or Joe Thomas and Mike Sullivan.

SOME HARD HITTERS.

We have had hard punchers in this country—men like Peter Maher and Joe Choyinski, for instance—who could inflict terrible punishment but who couldn't bear comparatively light taps in return. Fighters with glass jaws, the slang mongers call them. If Squires' jaw is as durable as Tom Sharkey's used to be and he has the faculty of pulling himself together and sailing in again after receiving a number of punches, I can see all kinds of trouble ahead for the American heavies who stand between the Australian and the world's championship.

The new arena will be two miles nearer San Francisco than the site of the Battling Nelson-Jimmy Britt pavilion and Coffroth says the street car service will be equal to the handling of large crowds.

amount of money in sight for a contest with him as a participant that it is particularly hard for him to get matches. His winning over John Willie at Tonopah means a little, as Willie was never recog-

SKATERS PUT UP GREAT RACE

Waldstein and Stoutenburg, two of the foremost roller skaters on the Pacific Coast, furnished one of the most spectacular races ever seen in this city last night when the pair raced a dead heat.

From the crack of the starting gun sending them away until the finish of the race the boys were practically on even terms. First one would dart in front only to lose the command in a few glides. Stoutenburg was in front by a small margin when the boys rounded into the last lap and excitement was very high among the spectators.

The boys are to meet at some date in the near future and settle the question of supremacy.

OAKLAND BALL CLUB HAS FINE CHANCE TO WIN PENNANT IN PACIFIC COAST LEAGUE THIS YEAR

Van Haltren Has Fine Team.

Veteran of Game Has His Boys Working in Unison and Winning.

By T. P. MAGILLIGAN.

Looks as though Oakland's going to make good in the Coast League this coming season.

Van Haltren's men are all playing great baseball, and if they maintain their present clip, they will make all the other clubs in the league sit up and look on.

Van's boys are batting well, and the pitchers are working as consistently as anyone could hope for.

To me, it looks doubtful if there is another pitching staff in the league fellow to the one Van Haltren has charge of.

Raidy, Wright, Randolph, Cates and Murphy are all good men.

RANDOLPH THE GOODS.

Randolph's work has been all to the good up to date. He has plenty of stamina, a good head, and his curves are deceptive when he gets them breaking right.

The big Alameda boy has the proper left. He is picking up the poundage that he lacked last year and this is helping him along greatly.

Randolph will likely be a big leaguer next season. He surely measures up to the big league standard, and there is many a worse pitcher than this same Randolph now in both of the big leagues.

Certainly Randolph is getting an experience in the Coast League that will help him. His control is good, and his speed measures up to the best requirements.

MACK'S ENDORSEMENT.

Connie Mack liked the boy's look last year, but at that time, it is undeniable that the keen eye of Connie found something a bit green in Randolph. But Randolph has improved right along since Connie Mack was out here, and the chances are that should Connie pay a visit next year he will annex Randolph.

Raidy and Wright are also moving along nicely. Wright is a likely looking lad. He is a big, powerful, confident boy and he is doing his share of the good work for the locals.

FOXY BILLY RAIDY.

Old Fox Raidy is still the possessor of that deceptive curve and slow ball, which are both paralyzers of the batting germ. Looks as though a better pitcher than one of these slow balls to Land's End, but they don't.

Murphy pitched a good game, barring his wildness, the first essay here, but at that, had the Oakland team played ball behind Haggerty and Wright, as a loser.

Hogan is a good pitcher, and when he goes into his stride he will make some of the batters bustle and squirm to free his legs.

Cates has a good pitcher Murphy is a good strong hitter. He wallops the ball with great force, and his hits come in a game before the season is over.

Cates has always been a good pitcher. He has a fine assortment of pitching sets.

In all it looks as though the Oakland team will be the one to beat for the pennant in the Coast League this season.

Well the Dr. Panglosses of the baseball press had their fling at Barney Joy. For a time they poked great wads of fun at Barney, but Barney has turned their ridicule into praise. Joy's game against the Oakland team stunned him as a pitcher far above the ordinary. Barney of course was a bit wild, but what pitcher wouldn't be under similar circumstances.

Joy came in for a lot of the soft pedal stuff. I was doubtful whether he would make good or not, and his first appearance was a trying ordeal. He bore up nobly, pitched good ball, and in all it looks as though Danny Long has picked up a very live sort of proposition in the big leagues.

BEAVERS STILL WEAK. Portland has to be strengthened. That's a moral cinch. McCredie realizes this as much as anyone, and he is setting about himself to get some live youngsters to replace the dead rabbits he has on his team. Of course, Walter will have a hard task, for good ball players are a scarce article. They don't grow in every outfit.

McCredie gets some good players for the sake of the league.

GOOD SHOWING OF FANS. The Oakland management is gratified at the showing made by the home fans. Oaklanders have patronized the games liberally, and the chances are that the incoming crowd at today's game will be as good as that ever turned out to see a game on the local grounds.

President of the Oakland baseball association is greatly pleased with the turnout, and will be no fault of his if the team doesn't merit the merry procession that has been attending the games at Freeman's Park.

Los Angeles has been playing a high class of baseball, but we wonder if they will do just as good away from home as they do at home.

Amateur Baseball

The baseball departments of the Jackson Furniture Company and the John Bruener Company played last Sunday. The Jacksons winning by a score of 14 to 7. The features of the game were the pitching of Donahue and the sensational one-hand stab of a hot liner by Behrman of the Jacksons.

The Jackson Furniture Company team challenges any furniture house around the bay.

The "Oaks" baseball team has added two more victories to its list by defeating the Mosswoods, 14 to 5. Also the Grays, 7 to 5. The line-up is: Pitcher, Wilkinson; catcher, Stephens; first base, Rowlands; second base, Reynolds; third base, Gonsales; shortstop, Smith; right field, F. Van Horn; center field, Fletcher; left field, Rucker.

Smith, although a midge, is showing up like an old leaguer. He is also improving much in every game. The whole team shows up well in hitting. Send all challenges to Charles E. Musladin, 664 18th St., Oakland.

Artie Kruger is doing nicely with Cincinnati, and the Oakland fans are hopeful that he will keep up the good work.

BREEZY NOTES.

"Frapped" is a handy word in early season baseball reports.

Murphy Jennings is getting a whole lot of baseball out of the Detroit team these days.

Do you know what Unglaub's name means in German? "Unglaub" is "don't believe."

Falkenberg and Blankenship are said to be the tallest battery in the big leagues.

Jimmy Collins' knee is not giving him any trouble, but for precaution's sake he still wears it bandaged.

Philadelphia labor unions have started a boycott against all baseball clubs not using union made balls.

Willie Keeler has struck out four times already this season, something he has not done during the whole of many previous years.

Usually it is not the stars who are hard to handle. The trouble men as a rule are the ones who feel they must cover up their shortcomings by attacks on the umpire.

Reger "Cricket's" Brennan has been touted as a better catcher than Kling, but Johnny doesn't need shin guards to help him. He has nothing up his sleeve nor down his stocking.

ONE ON JORDAN. Bernie McCoy, Mobile's new manager, says Otto Jordan and Bert Noblett, two Atlanta, Georgia, players, are about the greatest hunters ever. Here is the reason:

"The pair wanted to go hunting. I fitted them out with guns, explained how to work them, and sold them a supply of shells.

"I thought they walked clear around Atlanta twice before they found anything in the shape of game.

"Finally in a little bit of woods in the edge of town they saw a smoke rabbit, which had strayed from its usual haunts.

"You shoot," cried Otto.

"Kill it," screamed Bernie.

"Hit him, quick! Hit him, quick!" roared Bert.

"And there they stood doing the Alphonso and Gaston act, while the bunny got tired of waiting to be shot at and leaped off. It went into a hole under a log.

"After holding a caucus the two nimrods decided to wait until the rabbit came out, and then shoot it. Strangely enough, it did not appear, much to the disgust of the hunters.

"After waiting until about dusk they concluded it would be a good thing to hasten matters a little, and built a fire to smoke out the rabbit. The scheme appeared good, and in a short time they had a good volume of smoke pouring into the hole. Then followed another period of waiting. After a half hour had passed Otto walked around on the other side of the log to see where the smoke went. Then he almost fainted. The hole came out right on the other side of the log.

"Neither of the nimrods has been hunting since."

OAKLAND WIN DERRICK WAS IN BOUT GAME FROM SEALS

By T. P. MAGILLIGAN.

In a donnybrook, whirlrur, sort of game the Oakland Commuters slammed the bitumen out of the San Francisco Seals on their own ballfield by a score of 9 to 2.

And the score doesn't indicate just how badly the Commuters walloped the Seals. During the afternoon they garnered thirteen hits, including five two-baggers, three of which were credited to the demon Bigbee.

ASHLEY SLAMMED. Ashley opened on the firing line for the Seals. The gunners of the good ship Commute knocked his topknots off in the fourth inning and he waved the flag of distress.

Hoag was then sent to the rescue, while Ashley was advised to seek a high and dry spot.

Poor Hoag shared little better than his discolored pal. The Commuters splashed his guns freely and when taps sounded they had cleared three runs and seven hits off of his delivery.

Cates, who twirled for the Commuters, was in fine form and he had the Seals guessing throughout the game.

Van Haltren's men fielded in perfect form, not an error being charged against them, although our friend Heilmuller let one get through him that keener fielding would have saved.

OAKLAND'S GOOD START. Oakland got away in the lead in the second inning, when they scored one run. The Seals tied the game up in their half of the fourth inning, but the deadlock didn't last long. It was right in this inning that the cohorts of Van Haltren began to slay things up. Before the smoke had cleared away the Commuters had slammed out five hits, scored five runs and had driven Ashley back to the tall alfalfa.

The Seals scored one in the sixth inning on neat hitting. But after that Cates put the brakes on, and there was nothing doing for the Seals.

Hoag got into a choppy sea in the seventh inning, and before the squall settled Oakland had rapped out five hits and scored three runs.

The entire Oakland team batted in rare form. Bigbee proved an alibi to the charge that he couldn't hit by walloping on the second doubles.

Poor Bill Devereaux seems to have lost his batting eye. He made only four hits. Count 'em. The old boy has certainly unearthed the ginger can.

It was certainly a merry little batting bee, and the Oakland boys deserve credit for the way they handled the Seals.

Bill used Truck Egan's new bat, Evelyn, and fired off four shots during the fireworks that jarred the poor Seals somewhat. Every one of Red Dog's swats sounded like pistol shots in a shooting gallery.

Young Hoag, Mike Fisher's find, looks like a Gargoyle. If you want to know what a Gargoyle is ask Tom Hackett.

Barney Joy gave the Seals a real chivalry a flying lance at his pulchritudinous self. Barney batted for Hoag in the last spasm, but he didn't cover himself with any asparagus.

The heavy artillery of the Seals was constantly directed at Mr. Gleason's new fences, and after the smoke cleared up the fence resembled a Japanese shooting gallery after a band of intoxicated sailors have celebrated.

LOS ANGELES, April 27.—Packing-house rules reigned at the Chutes today, everybody in the park, including the players of both the Portland and the home team, and the spectators trying to get their hands on Umpire Derrick.

The old boy was very bad. He got off with some weird decisions on balls and strikes and then made matters worse by his work on the bases.

As a net result of Derrick's afternoon's work McCredie, the Portland captain, was thrown out of the game and put off the field for incessant kicking and, as Derrick claims, profane language.

Happy Hogan was plastered with a $10 fine, and Derrick himself was surrounded by a mob after the game and required police protection to escort him from the grounds in safety.

Calif did the pitching for the visitors and Carnes was on the mound for the Angels. Dillon's men broke the tie and added a run in the sixth inning, when they came through with a brace of rallies. Brashear beat out an infield hit, Smith sacrificed him. Dillon hit to Sahn, was out at first, Brashear scoring. The claim was made, but not allowed that Dillon interfered with the throw at first base. Cravath walked, stole second and went to third on Donohue's wild heave to second base. Delmas singled to left, scoring Cravath. Hogan made the third out. One more run was added by the Angels in the eighth.

"TO THE MADHOUSE" THE STARTLING

EDICT That IMPRISONS TITLED OFFENDERS, WHETHER THEY Are IN-SANE or NOT,
WHEN THEY HAVE SINNED AGAINST the WILL of ROYAL
POWER.

Former Crown Princess Louise of Saxony

Helene Vacarescu Sent Packing.

The revelation, now made for the first time, that "Carmen Sylva," the poet-Queen of Roumania, though perfectly sane, was incarcerated in a madhouse for nearly two years for offending her husband, will startle ordinary mortals, who will scarcely believe it possible that the mere whim of a king could send a queen into so awful a prison.

Yet this is by no means unusual punishment for royal personages. When you read in the dispatches from Europe that Prince So-and-So, having offended the ruler of his country by some royal escapade, such as falling in love with the wrong girl, has been "ordered into retirement," you will know, after you have read what follows, just what sort of retirement he is in.

Of all the perils that dog the steps of Old World royalty there is none that inspires them with more apprehension than the madhouse. It is an ever-present danger, which they dread even more than the bomb of the Anarchist and the bullet of the homicidal crank.

They may be said to be doubly exposed to the menace of captivity on the charge of insanity. For condemnation to detention as a lunatic is a fate which awaits not only those whose minds are really unbalanced, but likewise members of the reigning houses who have by some disobedience to the mysterious so-called Family Laws incurred the anger of their sovereign.

"The anointed of the Lords" has several means of disciplining recalcitrant kinsfolk. He can subject them to arrest, deprive them of the use of the royal or imperial liveries, dock their allowance and vest the administration of their estates in the hands of trustees. He can suspend them from the enjoyment of the honors, the prerogatives and the immunities of princes and princesses of the blood, and, worst of all, he can place them under restraint as temporarily deranged.

It is seldom that the public is made aware of these punishments, and as a general rule the consignment of a personage of royal rank to detention as a lunatic is explained away by the announcement that he or she is traveling abroad incognito, with the object of relaxation and change of scene. There is hardly a writer qualified by the experience of court life to discuss in print the joys and the sorrows of those born, figuratively speaking, on the steps of the throne, who has not alluded more or less openly to the role played by the madhouse in the existence of these illustrious personages, which goes far to explain the extraordinary submission which one and all are so ready to accord to the tyrannical whims and despotic caprices of the monarch.

CARMEN SYLVA'S TWO-YEAR DETENTION.

Helene Vacarescu, in a book which she has recently published entitled, "A Royal Wife," and which, though a novel, is based on her experiences as maid of honor to the Queen of Roumania, makes reference to this dread of the madhouse. And not without reason. For her royal mistress, so widely known in literature under the pen name of "Carmen Sylva," was kept under restraint in one of her brother's German castles for nearly two years, by way of punishment for having persisted in promoting an objectionable project of marriage between her nephew, the Crown Prince, and her favorite attendant—namely, the sloop-eyed and somewhat portly Helene Vacarescu. The Roumanian Government informed their King that if he or the Queen countenanced any such matrimonial alliance it would result in the overthrow of his dynasty. It moreover insisted that the Queen should dismiss from her entourage Mlle. Vacarescu.

Rather than yield to this last particular, the Queen preferred to leave Roumania, and took up her residence with Mlle. Vacarescu in Venice, in flagrant defiance of the views of the Government and of the commands of the King. The latter suddenly appeared upon the scene and proceeded summarily to dismiss Mlle. Vacarescu and also the Queen's Alsatian secretary. The Queen herself he sent off to Germany, where she was detained under medical restraint, as an alleged lunatic, for nearly two years and only permitted to return to Roumania after the Crown Prince, completely cured of his infatuation for the maid of honor, had led to the altar Mary of Great Britain and of Coburg, justly celebrated as the most fascinating Princess and the most ardent coquette of all the reigning houses of Europe.

That Queen Elizabeth of Roumania was ever really insane no one will be willing to believe. There is assuredly no trace of any mental disorder in the voluminous works of her so profile pen, and under the circumstances the time which she spent under restraint in Germany must be regarded in the light of a piece of royal discipline. It has apparently proved efficacious. For, much to the disgust of Mlle. Vacarescu, the Queen has never made any attempt to see her since. Nor is it possible to blame King Charles for having acted too harshly in the matter. For he was unable to induce his wife to listen to reason, and he had at stake not only his crown and his dynasty, but likewise the welfare of the people, to whom he had devoted his entire life, since his removal from the throne would have resulted in political and economic chaos in Roumania.

It is scarcely fair to include Princess Louise of Belgium, the heroine of so many unsavory scandals, in the same category as the respected and in many ways admirable Queen of Roumania. Yet, inasmuch as the leading specialists on diseases of the mind have rendered a diagnoses to the effect that not only is the same now, but that she has never been insane, her incarceration for several years in a private lunatic asylum, first near Vienna and then at Dresden, must be regarded in the light of a punishment for the gross indiscretions of which she had rendered herself guilty, rather than as a medical precaution. It may be recalled that she had not only eloped with a cavalry captain who had been in the service of her husband, Prince Philip of Coburg, as equerry, but had likewise in conjunction with him obtained large sums of money by means of acceptance to which the name of her sister, Crown Princess of Stephanie, had been forged. The captain was sentenced by the Austrian courts to a term of penal servitude, after undergoing military degradation, while the Princess, partly by way of punishment, and partly with a view to atone in the eyes of the public for her immunity from trial and sentence by the criminal tribunals, was consigned to a madhouse, from which after several years of captivity she made her escape in an extremely sensational manner.

AN ARCHDUKE'S SEVERE PUNISHMENT.

No commission of physicians or court of justice has ever pronounced Archduke Louis Victor, the only surviving brother of Emperor Francis Joseph, to be insane. Yet this Prince, who was formerly one of the most familiar figures in Viennese life, has for the last five years been rigorously confined in a mountain castle, hidden away in the most remote corner of the Austrian Tyrol, his beautiful palace in the metropolis closed up, and his entire household dismissed. He is as sane today as he ever was, but is suffering the fate of a lunatic on account of a terrible scandal in which he became involved, and which even his brother, the patient, forgiving and indulgent Emperor Francis Joseph, could not afford to overlook or to pardon. In fact, Archduke Louis Victor, who was once the object of the most kindly and affectionate solicitude on the part of the monarch, has now completely passed out of the latter's life, and is practically dead, as far as the Imperial family is concerned.

The consort, too, of the present King of Saxony, who in the eyes of the Catholic Church, to which both she and her husband belong, still remains his full-fledged wife, in spite of the divorce decree of the civil courts, spent several months in a lunatic asylum at Nyon, in Switzerland, on the shores of Lake Lemman, after her extraordinary escapade with the children's tutor, Prof. Andre Giron. In fact, she was only released at the urgent request of her parents, the Grand Duke and Grand Duchess of Tuscany, in time to admit of the birth of the youngest girl, little Princess Anna Monica, beneath their roof.

And when the only son of the late Duke of Saxe-Coburg became involved in the most distressing scandals at Berlin, which necessitated his immediate withdrawal from the Prussian capital, he was placed under restraint in a sanitarium in Austria, where he promptly proceeded to blow out his brains.

Even still greater than the number of these scions of royalty who are imprisoned as mentally deranged by way of discipline, though perfectly sane, is that of the bona-fide lunatics of the reigning houses of Europe. That there should be so many of them is not surprising, handicapped as they are in the way of heredity. For consanguinity in the matrimonial alliances of their ancestors has been the rule rather than the exception, and there have been so many marriages, not only between first cousins, but even between uncles and nieces, that the wonder is that there should be any sane or physically sound people at all among the sovereign dynasties of the Old World. King Humbert and Queen Marguerite of Italy were first cousins, being respectively the son and daughter of two brothers. King Humbert's youngest brother, Amadeus, who reigned for some years as King of Spain, married after the death of his first wife, his own niece, the now widowed Duchess of Aosta. Prince Albert and Queen Victoria of England were first cousins. So too were the Count and Countess of Paris, the parents of the present Duke of Orleans and the Queen of Portugal.

Unions of this kind are strictly forbidden by the Orthodox Church, in spite of which the Grand Duke Cyril of Russia, who stands fourth in the line of succession to the throne of the Romanoffs, has married his first cousin, the divorced Grand Duchess of Hesse, whose former husband was also her first cousin. Prince Henry of Prussia and his popular wife are the children of two sisters, while the King and Queen of Norway are likewise first cousins. When one recalls all that has been written against consanguineous alliances of this kind by the most eminent physiologists, and remembers the attitude of nearly every church in existence to such marriages, the wonder increases, not that there are so many lunatics among royalty, but that there should be any of them who are mentally and physically sound.

TWO INSANE RULERS OF TODAY.

Two states of Europe are subject at the present moment to the sway of the sceptre of full-fledged lunatics, namely, Bavaria and Reuss. Prince Henry XXIV., of Reuss-Greiz, who succeeded his father some five years ago, is deaf, dumb, blind and imbecile, having inherited much of his mental infirmity from his father, who was the strangest combination of a lunatic and a clever man that ever occupied a King Louis of Bavaria's Fatal Escape.

European throne.

As for the present King of Bavaria, whose dementia, like that of Nebuchadnezzar, takes the peculiar form of imagining himself to be either a four-footed animal or a bird, he had already lost his reason during the reign of his elder brother, King Louis II., who was drowned in Lake Starnberg, while attempting to escape, after having been placed under restraint as insane. Louis's dementia involved his government in all sorts of complications; notably on one occasion when he was on the point of carrying to a successful issue an attempt to kidnap the present King of Italy, then a mere boy, and to hold him a prisoner in some Bavarian mountain fastness, until the lad's father, King Humbert, should consent to restore the sovereignty of Rome to the Pope. When Louis died in the tragical manner described above, it was expected that in view of his brother Otto's insanity the latter's claims to the crown would be set aside in favor of his uncle, the present regent. But respect for the principles of legitimacy prevailed over common sense, and the crazy Otto was proclaimed King and has reigned in name only ever since, that is to say, for the space of twenty-one years.

During all that time his subjects have never seen him, save once, when he managed to escape from his palace prison of Furstenreid, and to make his way to Munich, where, entering St. Michael's Church, he threw himself down on his knees before the altar, and commenced to beseech the Almighty in a loud voice that he "would graciously restore the light of reason to his unhappy servant Otto, in order that he might become a blessing to his people." The painful scene being brought to a close by a

MRS. FLORA NORRIS OF IDORA PARK AS SHE POSED FOR A TRIBUNE ARTIST

TWO POSES OF LILLIAN RUSSELL TO APPEAR AT THE MACDONOUGH

LILLIAN RUSSELL IS COMING

Famous Beauty Opens Here Tomorrow

In England every woman admires and envies the beauty of the queen. In America their cousins search for the fountain of youth at which Miss Lillian Russell drinks. There is no secret in her methods by which after an active career full of travel and hard work, she still holds the position of being the most beautiful woman of her type on the stage.

Her first advice to her sisters is "Don't worry." Worry will make more wrinkles in an hour than time can chase in a decade. Don't let little things annoy you. Life is made up of trifles. Once the habit is formed of making mountains of mole hills, no reserve force is left when big problems are faced. Fresh air possesses more curative and preservative powers than all the doctor's prescriptions and beauty recipes in the world. Miss Russell spends two hours every day in the open air. She dresses comfortably, leaving the face and throat uncovered. If the weather permits she takes a brisk walk, breathing deeply and evenly, expanding the lungs to their fullest capacity, throwing back her head and stepping firmly and briskly. Every morning, as soon as she rises, she goes to an open window and exercises and clears her lungs by deep breathing. When traveling she spends an hour each day on the observation platform of her car. Walking is her cure for trifling colds and minor ills. On stormy days she dresses for protection, but wears no veil or tight covering at the throat.

In her diet she makes no restrictions. She eats what she likes, but selects a simple fare of plain foods, avoiding all rich sauces and heavy gravies. In her bath she prefers one of the same temperature of the room, rubbing herself down briskly with a coarse towel, getting as much light exercise as possible out of a necessity.

For her daily exercise, if engagements and rehearsals compel her time in the open air to be taken up in driving to and from the theater, she uses the simpler movements of the army "setting up" drill. This drill is now in use in the schools and a mother can learn the movements from her son and daughter.

The problem is one that each woman must solve for herself; the rules are simple, but they are not iron clad. Miss Russell and her sister, Susan Westford, followed the same course last summer. They took equal walks, followed the same diet and exercised together, yet Miss Russell lost weight and her sister gained in flesh. However, Miss Westford was never in better health and her weight is less than it would have been if she had not followed the rules of not worrying, living simple and taking plenty of exercise in the open air. She will be at the Macdonough Theater April 23, 26 and May 1 with Wednesday matinee.

IDORA PARK.

"El Capitan," Sousa's martial opera, is the magnet that is attracting goodly audiences to Idora Park and the stirring march melodies, especially the one with the military band assisting the big ensemble, creates the wildest enthusiasm nightly.

The comedy in "El Capitan" is exceptionally fine and the company has never done better work.

There will be a matinee this afternoon at two-fifteen. Notwithstanding the enormous business being done with this offering the management will adhere to its policy of frequent changes, and after one more week of the Sousa work, we are promised a superlatively fine production of Victor Herbert's gem, "The Fortune Teller," in which Alice Nielsen achieved such success in London that it was the means of her entering the realms of grand opera.

Like everything that Victor Herbert has composed, "The Fortune Teller" bubbles over with bright, crisp and fresh melody, and this gifted composer has never done a better thing and that is saying no little.

For this production the management has specially engaged two new artists, Andrew Bogart and Oliver Reece.

Andrew Bogart is a well known San Franciscan who has made a most successful career both in this country and abroad. He came West for a few weeks vacation with his family, but this energetic management got a hold of him and tempted him into consenting to appear for this one production. He is the possessor of a magnificent tenor robust voice, is a splendid actor and a man of exceptionally fine stage presence.

Mr. Reece is an Australian bass-cantante who has just completed a concert tour of Canada. He is a man of wide experience having appeared in opera concert and dramatic companies.

The chorus and orchestra will have plenty to do in this opera and under Paul Steindorff's skillful guidance it is always a pleasure to hear the ensemble work at Idora.

WALTER DELEON IN ONE OF HIS FUNNY PARTS IN IDORA PARK COMPANY

By general request a grand revival of "When Johnny Comes Marching Home" will follow.

The new improvements at the park are being rapidly completed and before the summer is over Idora Park will be one of the handsomest amusement resorts in America.

The usual open air concert by the two bands will be given at seven to-night.

ECKHARDT'S COMING.

Beginning Friday night, May 3d, next, the Eckhardt's Ideals will play a three nights' engagement which will include the customary Saturday and Sunday matinee. The company's repertoire includes the latest plays. The cast is said to be exceptionally strong, and includes such well known people as Oliver J. Eckhardt, Frank Howard, Leota Howard and Georgia A. Nichols.

EIGHTH STREET THEATER.

This theater will close its doors tomorrow for one week to enable the proprietors to have the place thoroughly renovated and remodeled and when it reopens on Monday of next week, it will compare favorably in appointment to any vaudeville house in Oakland. This theater, since its inception to the public a few months ago, immediately jumped into popularity, meeting with great success, and as a result it will become a permanent factor in the theatrical circle in this city, and the best vaudeville talent obtainable will always be seen at this play house. The location on Eighth street, between Broadway and Franklin, is an ideal one for the business, this particular block being one of the busiest in the city. Notwithstanding the high priced attractions that will be seen at this theater, the price of admission will remain the same: ten cents and twenty cents. The bill for the re-opening will be a gilt-edge one, and augurs well for the future prosperity of this theater.

YE LIBERTY PLAYHOUSE.

The performances this afternoon and evening will close the run of "The Sign of the Cross" at the Liberty Playhouse. This play has proven to be a drama of sterling worth and has been the medium of introducing the finest scenic display yet made at the Liberty, which is saying a good deal.

Tomorrow evening the Bishop players will present for the first time in Oakland at popular prices Clyde Pich's celebrated satire, "The Climbers," generally conceded to be his best play. It pictures New York society life as it really exists today and will be remembered by many as having been played here some time ago by Amelia Bingham, who scored very heavily in it.

"The Climbers" has a distinctly novel introduction with the appearance of Mrs. Hunter and her three daughters in deep mourning upon their return from the funeral of Mr. Hunter, which partook somewhat of the character of a social function. The shallow seeming of the widow is disclosed by the empty-pated prattle she indulges in with her friends and daughters. The discovery is soon made that Mr. Hunter has left his family practically penniless, and then commences the struggle of the Climbers to maintain the social position, about which the play revolves.

The main plot concerns one of Mrs. Hunter's daughters, Mrs. Sterling, and her husband, Dick Sterling, a stock speculator. Sterling squanders his wife's private fortune and the funds of friends entrusted in his keeping and is saved from utter ruin by Edward Worden, a friend of the Sterlings, whom it afterwards develops is secretly in love with Mrs. Sterling. Sterling, shattered in mind and body, purposely takes an overdose of sleeping potion and passes quietly away, the audience being left to guess the rest.

"The Climbers" contains many clever lines, an abundance of comedy and excellent acting parts. The cast will be one of uniform strength and the leading roles will be in the hands of Landers Stevens, Franklin Underwood and Isabelle Fletcher.

"The Climbers" will be presented for one week only and will be followed by "Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall."

BELL THEATER.

Varr and Evans, comedians, are to furnish the feature act at the Bell Theater next week. They will present the farce comedy, "The Two Heavens," with which they recently scored a marked success in New York.

Comedy is to be the rule of the Bell show and there promises to be an abundance of humor. Miss Ida Howell, a very bright comedienne, will entertain with a monologue and comic songs. Viola and Engel, renowned comedy acrobats, will add to the amusement of the occasion. They are barrel-jumpers and have a high standing in the vaudeville world. Frank Cushman, formerly an end man with Haverley's Mastodon minstrels, will appear in a monologue, with songs and juggling thrown in. Cushman is known as one of the best black-faced comedians in vaudeville.

The Ritzers will furnish a posturing act. Vernie R. McPherson is to sing an illustrated song and two reels of motion pictures will complete the bill.

Miss Isabelle Fletcher Is a "Good Fellow"

By BETTY MARTIN

MISS ISABEL FLETCHER

"I am a 'good fellow,' and I hope the time will never come when I am not a good fellow." This was what Isabelle Fletcher said to me the other day, in the midst of a very interesting conversation held in her apartments on Franklin street.

"What is your definition of a good fellow?" I asked.

"A good fellow is, I think, one who tries to be agreeable to everybody."

That summing up of the term might not suit everybody; in fact, it might be open to a gentle bit of argument, so much depends upon words. But Miss Fletcher elucidated further:

"A professional woman," continued she, "has to be a good fellow. We of the stage meet all kinds of people: church members, society people, the conservative element, and good fellows amongst them. We have to meet them all. We don't have to make intimate friends of those we don't like, but we are obliged to meet them. If we started in to snub people, where would we, who depend upon public approval, be?"

"But," she went on earnestly, "there are good fellows and good fellows. I hope I shall always continue to be a good fellow, but not in the sense they meant it."

By way of explanation in regard to "they," I had read a printed article signed by every member of Ye Liberty theatrical company, in which they flatly refuted certain other printed statements to the effect that the lady in question was not a favorite among them, nor was that all. Other things had been said, not of the pleasantest, perhaps, and which Miss Fletcher took deeply to heart. And it was concerning these I had come to talk to her. She was feeling badly, very, over these published statements. It was not, declared she to me, so much what was said as what was insinuated between the lines, and these insinuations were awful, particularly in that she was alone in California, with no brother or father to hunt down the man who said them. She would very much like to have dropped the whole matter, yet in justice to herself, an explanation was necessary, so, in effect, spoke the actress.

"I do not care for this sort of notoriety," asserted Miss Fletcher. "Of course we like advertising; the more widely an actress is known the better it is both for her manager and herself. But I don't want advertising that reflects on my reputation."

"But," urged I, "this is your opportunity to let the public learn your standpoint."

At this she brightened.

"Of course, and I don't see why one good fellow should have been picked out from all the others for comment. We are supposed to be free here in the West; California is known all the world over as a land of good fellows; people here have the reputation of being broad-minded and good-hearted. This, too, is the land of wine. Surely we must drink some of it!"

Miss Fletcher, by the way, had just been drinking a cup of tea, to which beverage she declared she was devoted. It was a little after two o'clock in the afternoon and rehearsal was just over. She was very tired; almost ill, and had discarded her trim-fitting tailor suit for a Japanese kimono of dark red silk, embroidered in flying white storks. The flat, which she shares with an artist friend bespeaks domesticity to a degree. It is a dainty, attractive little place of five rooms, bright and sunny. A bedroom apiece, kitchen, dining and reception room make up the whole. No servant is kept.

"We tried a Filipino boy, but he was too much trouble, so we had to let him go."

"I shouldn't think you'd have much time for housework," I ventured.

"Nor do I; my maid comes up from the theater and helps a little. I do what I can and my friend who lives here with me is such a splendid cook. You ought to taste some of her Spanish chicken, it can't be beat!"

It was in the dining-room, when I was being shown over the apartment, that the subject of housekeeping, which Miss Fletcher declares she delights in, came up. It transpired that she has an occasional "afternoon" in that same room, too, participated in by professional friends only.

"You dine out occasionally?" "Yes, once in a while, when I feel like it, I dine out. I won't mention names, but I go to the best restaurant in town."

"And"—I must confess to a feeling of hesitancy in putting the question, but the matter had been referred to among others, "you do drink wine."

"Occasionally I take a glass of wine at dinner, but, as I said before, I do it in the open, dining, possibly, with a party of friends in the best restaurant of Oakland, and I don't think I'm an exception, do you?"

Frankly speaking, I did not

Time was, in Oakland, when social ostracism would have followed a glass of wine drunk in public, even to the accompaniment of a good dinner. But that era is passed. The town has outgrown provincialism, and the question of wine is left to the individual conscience. It is one of the things to be tasted or left alone, as fancy dictates. To make a habit of drinking is quite another thing.

"Excess in anything," said Miss Fletcher, "is wrong."

"And as for taking automobile rides, of course I take them. I like them, and so does most everybody else. I do not have much time for social life, my work makes heavy demands upon my time. Rehearsal lasts from ten or half-past in the morning up to two or three, sometimes in the afternoon. We play every evening, and have matinees besides. Every week the play is changed and then there is a new part to learn. That doesn't leave much time for recreation except at night."

after the theater. I've had to refuse many invitations to dinner or luncheon because of my work.

"As to this talk, I consider my private life to be my own business."

"Y-e-s, but an actress is so much in the public. It is always a question how far she should consider that."

"True. No one wants to defy public opinion. If the public doesn't care for an actress, what would she do? I want people to think well of me. I've worked hard since I've been here, and I never knew how many friends I had until this trouble came up. My telephone keeps ringing all the time, and expressions of sympathy reach me. As to my relations with the other members of Ye Liberty, they are of the pleasantest, and I enjoy equally well playing with either of the two leading men."

"Is there anything in the report that you're about to leave Ye Liberty company?"

"I want to show you this letter from Mr. Bishop," replied Miss Fletcher, handing me a type-written paper, which read:

Oakland, Cal., April 20, 1937.

Miss Isabelle Fletcher, Ye Liberty Playhouse, Oakland, Cal.

My Dear Miss Fletcher:—Referring to the article which appeared in the sporting edition of last night's TRIBUNE concerning you, will say that I regret the appearance of same very much and the unwarranted attack made upon you personally. I am sure that the members of the company have only the kindest feelings toward you and feel that you are the victim of a grievous mistake, which sentiment is also shared by the management. Your season with my company closes according to your contract only, no notice whatever having been thought of or given you. I wish at this time to thank you for your courtesy in continuing your engagement until I hear definitely as to Nance O'Neill's opening date.

I feel sure that the article was not sanctioned by the management of THE TRIBUNE but was shoved in at the last moment by some one connected with the sporting department of that paper, who is antagonistic or prejudiced.

Yours very truly,
HARRY W. BISHOP.

"Mr. Bishop is an absolutely fair man," remarked Miss Fletcher, when I'd finished reading the communication. "He is always just and I consider him my best audience. His criticisms are always to the point; I would rather play under his management than any one else; my engagement here lasts until June, but I shall not go until the date is set for Nance O'Neill's coming. When I come back to California, as I expect to, I hope it will be under Mr. Bishop's management."

Shortly after this remark Miss Fletcher showed me a picture.

"That is the man."

"The man—" I repeated.

"I'm to marry. He's a splendid man; the engagement is of four years' standing."

"And after the wedding are you to return to the stage?"

"That will be as I choose. If I do I hope to come back to California. If I do not continue in the profession, which would be his preference, we will make our home in the East."

Practically, this is about all Miss Isabelle Fletcher had to say. She does not deny that she is fond of automobiling. Neither does she take exception to the statement that she takes an occasional glass of wine with her dinner, which statement was qualified by the words, "I drink very little liquor"; and she glories in the thought that she is a good fellow, while wondering that it should cause even passing comment. She regrets that any action of hers should have been misconstrued and she loves California.

THE DESIRE

To Be Youthful Again

Why do persons wish they were younger in years? Is the motive to be found in an honest desire to live one's life over and better, or in mere envy of those who seem to be lighter-hearted? If the former, there is no good reason to believe that the wider experience brought into play would make adequate compensation for the certain loss of the enthusiasm of ignorance; if the latter, there could be no effect other than the unhappiness of mental, moral and even physical isolation. The fullness of enjoyment of companionship can be had only with one's contemporaries in years, faculties and sympathies. The wish to renew one's youth which we hear expressed so often is wholly thoughtless and, if the opportunity for its gratification really offered, would be abandoned as quickly as any person living would reject a proposal to make a complete exchange of soul, mind, body and all surrounding conditions with any other person.

LITTLE MELINDA BROWN

Torn and battered and smeared with paint,
Ladies in purple and knights in blue;—
Cinderella of gentle plight
Decked in a gown of gorgeous hue;
Hop-o'-my-thumb and Goody Two-shoe;
A fairy green and a yellow spook,—
These are the playmates once she knew;
"Little Melinda Brown—Her Book."

Here is the fabled and fair Gersaint;
Here is the giant Boigharhoo;
Here is the soft-voiced, lovely saint
Of the falling diamonds and pearls; and, too,
This is the terrible Bluebeard who Spoke so loud that his wives all shook!
Do you remember? I know you do:
"Little Melinda Brown—Her Book."

Apples of Sodom have left their taint;
In the ambrosia is taste of rue;
Try as we may, alas! we mayn't
Summon them now, as we used to do;
Spirits of life when life was new,
Or ever our errand way we took;
These are the stories that once were true,
"Little Melinda Brown—Her Book."

ENVOY.

Friends of my childhood, fair and quaint,
Forgive, forgive, that my heart forsook!
My love I send in this rhythmic plaint
To "Little Melinda Brown—Her Book."
—Cecilia Myrover, in Harper's.

FOILS

Give me drifted winter-ways,
Whence, returned the ingle-blaze
Shall like altar-fire divine
Leap before these eyes of mine.
Give me hours of hungry dearth,
That I may possess the earth—
Find Olympian banquets spread
In the country wine and bread!

Give me strife (who so love Peace!)
That, when furrowing wars shall cease,
Fruitful be the olives found,
Springing from that blackened ground.
I, who so love Love—ah—yes!
Give me Hate and Bitterness,
That, when these are past and done,
Love and I may more be one.

Give me sleep, that I may feel
Clothe's hand new start the wheel
Of another day's bright spinning
And when the warp and woof are thinning
And the daylight is half blind,
Give me Death, that I may find
Life upon some morning height
Shewn and sheer above the Night!

—Edith M. Thomas, in the Atlantic.

"Let Us be Hero and Heroine" The Play Writing Romance of "Tom" Johnson's Daughter

A literary courtship, followed by a dramatic wedding—such is the romantic story of Miss Bessie Flourney Johnson of Cleveland, O., and Sig. Frederico Mariani, of Milan, Italy. The lady, with the Yankee spirit of independence, not content to be famous merely as the daughter of a celebrity, must needs be celebrated herself. She became an actress. The man, wearying of the atmosphere of idleness, sought fame with his pen. Mayor Tom L. Johnson of Cleveland, likes men who do things, and so his daughter is now Signora Mariani, and she and her husband are about to settle down in New York.

It is said that every human life contains the material for at least one play. Be that as it may, there is one play that contains the love story of Signor and Signora Mariani. This is the play they wrote together. The actress furnished the stagecraft, the literary man supplied the love interest. What the play is about no one knows, but that there is something of themselves in it the authors would scarcely deny.

Monte Carlo has been the first and last act of innumerable comedies and tragedies. Men have won and lost honor in a night in its brilliant gambling rooms. There is something in the air of Monte Carlo that suggests great crises. Ambition, failure, hate and all the emotions that the dramatist makes use of are in the atmosphere, and the greatest of these is love. Love is the keynote of the play, and it was at Monte Carlo that Miss Bessie Johnson of Cleveland, first came into the life the Italian man of leisure, who is now her husband. This was seven years ago. Now, seven years is a long time in swift living America, and seven years in dreamy Italy creep at a snail's pace. Love has in it something of the spirit of spring; it revivifies and makes anew; so the Italian of leisure became an American hustler. He sailed for New York, interested himself in the steel business, and kept his eye on Cleveland, O. Not content with thinking of it, he took the train and visited it, and there he renewed his acquaintance with Miss Johnson, her mother and his Honor the Mayor. People began to talk, but Mrs. Johnson smilingly denied that her daughter thought seriously of Sig. Mariani, and, further than the fact of their been seen together out driving, there was no occasion for gossip.

So much for details. Of course, you know that the first act of a play is largely made up of explanation. Keep in mind then: The Italian man of leisure and the daughter of a typical American; Love, the prompter, is in position; the curtain goes up and the real play is on.

Italy is the lotus-land of the world, and the isle of dreams and poetry. Mariani, born and reared in this atmosphere, was naturally poetic. Words were his playthings, and it was his exquisite choice and use of them that charmed the American girl. He could express in iridescent words the rainbow moods of all women. Now, even an intellectual American girl respects a man who understands her. This man not only understood, but could beautify his knowledge. Love guided his pen. She read and began to take an interest.

Every woman is at heart an actress; Miss Johnson was no exception. His Honor the Mayor turned "angel," financed the "show," and his daughter courted applause and dollars. But the mimic word did not satisfy her. She was the child of a great personality—Mayor Tom L. Johnson. There was not on the stage enough scope for the full and complete expression of herself. Literature smiled at her, and she acknowledged the situation.

Little sketches resulted; little glints of emotion, every one of them, but they did not satisfy. Then came the great idea.

"I will write a play; it shall represent life as I know it. I will put my heart and soul into it."

Then she began the big work, the real expression of herself. It is said that to write a drama is child's play, but to get it produced is genius. And when Miss Johnson threw herself into the breach, with all the enthusiasm and virility of her energetic nature, she could see nothing but success. Day after day, week after week the work went on. Society beckoned to her; she shook her head and the play grew. It had taken possession of her; she had no thought outside of it; and then one day something happened.

She realized something was wrong with her work!

Feverishly she rewrote, recast and searched for the cause. Something was wrong; her work was all in vain; she had missed the essential point and didn't know what it was, nor how to find it. The daughter of the Mayor was baffled.

Hundreds of pages of writing fluttered about her, taunting her, laughing at her. The bitter truth came home to her.

Did she weep? Had she been playing the scene on the stage she would have wept and perhaps torn her hair; but this was a very real situation, that needed a very real solution, so instead of weeping she thought. In the thought was the image of an Italian man of leisure.

Sig. Mariani suddenly became a very necessary personage; Miss Johnson's happiness depended upon him; he could find whatever was lacking in the play.

A note brought Sig. Mariani to Cleveland and gave new material to the gossips.

"What is wrong with my play?"

How can anything you do be wrong?"

He took the play, read it and smiled.

"Well, what is the point I have missed?"

"You have not missed it; you've merely been blind to it; you knew what was lacking, but you didn't know the name."

"Do you know the name?"

Miss Bessie Johnson.

"I have known it for seven years; I learned it at Monte Carlo."

"What is the name of the essential thing my play lacks?"

"Love."

The play was rewritten and the love interest was supplied. The work became more interesting now; where before a mind had been in it, now a heart was in it. Two souls with but a single play. The play had a reason for being written and the dramatists had a reason for writing it.

And so they were married and wrote happily ever afterward.

The play is not finished; they are still writing, still supplying the "heart interest."

This all goes to prove that we cannot play with love.

Love was the essential point in their play; it had grown to be the only thing worth while in their lives.

"TO THE MADHOUSE" WITH THE TITLED OFFENDERS OF ROYALTY

Jesuit priest, who had known the King as a boy, and who happened to be present.

Empress Charlotte of Mexico, whose husband was shot at Queretaro in 1867, has been wholly insane ever since that time, that is to say for forty years a prisoner of her brother, King Leopold of the Belgians. She was in Europe, appealing to the sovereigns for their intervention in behalf of her husband when she received news of his execution, and suddenly lost her reason during the course of a private audience with Pius IX., the episode constituting one of the most dramatic and pathetic scenes that has ever taken place within the walls of the Vatican.

The late Prince Charles Alexander of Lippe, whose death three or four years ago gave rise to the troublesome controversy in connection with the succession to his throne, remained his entire reign in the private lunatic asylum of St. Gilgenberg, near Aunsbach, too crazy to administer the government of his principality, yet sane enough to be a wonderfully expert chess player.

And then there was Sultan Murad, who died only last summer, after having spent exactly thirty years behind the gilded bars of his prison palace of Dolme Bagtche, at Constantinople, to which he was consigned after being removed from the throne, on the ground of insanity, in 1876. His younger brother, Prince Reschad, now next heir to the throne, has likewise been a prisoner of state for many years, and no one to this day can say with certainty whether he is really insane as alleged or merely a victim of the fear and jealousy of his other brother, the present Sultan.

The reigning Grand Duke of Oldenburg is, if not insane, at any rate somewhat odd, and having even less to do than the ordinary run of petty sovereigns, finds it necessary to make periodical retreats to a sanitarium in order to recover from the results of "overwork."

Duke Siegfried of Bavaria has been out of his mind ever since he was jilted some years ago on the very eve of the day appointed for marriage by Archduchess Maria Annunciata, now the first lady of the Austrian Empire and acting Empress. And here it may be stated that cruel disappointment in love is claimed to have been the determining cause of the insanity of his cousins, both the late and the present King of Bavaria.

Prince Peter of Coburg, who was born heir presumptive to the throne of Brazil, his mother being the youngest daughter of Don Pedro, has been afflicted with homicidal mania ever since the revolution at Rio which robbed his grandfather of his crown and drove him into exile. Brought up in the Brazilian navy and devoted to his career, he already showed signs of mental aberration on the voyage from Brazil to Portugal after the proclamation of the republic at Rio. But it was not until he reached Vienna and took up his residence in the Coburg palace there that he completely lost his reason.

But few people are aware that King Oscar of Sweden had an elder brother, Gustav, who was mentally unbalanced. Nor are there many nowadays who recall the role played by an American adventurer, hailing from Philadelphia, in wrecking the entire life of the now completely imbecile Grand Duke Nicholas Constantinowitch of Russia, who is living under the care of his medical attendants in a villa on the Crimean shores of the Black Sea, in strictest seclusion.

A CAPTIVITY OF THIRTY YEARS.

A brother of the Queen of Greece and of the Grand Duke Constantine Constantinowitch, who is President of the Imperial Academy of Science and the translator of Shakespeare into Russian, he became so infatuated with Mrs. Hattie Blackford, better known under her "nom de guerre" of "Fanny Lear," that for her sake he stole not only his mother's jewels, but likewise committed the sacrilege of stealing a number of precious stones from the treasury of the Imperial Chapel. For this he was deprived of all his honors and dignities, and incarcerated in a fortress on the shores of the Caspian Sea. Alexander III. absolutely refused to pardon him, and when the present Czar, who is much more kind hearted, finally yielded to the entreaties of the Queen of Greece, and consented to the liberation of her brother from his captivity of thirty years, and to permit his return to Russia in Europe, it was found that his reason had been completely wrecked.

The late Duke of Teck, father of the Princess of Wales, and grandfather therefore of the future king of England, spent the last two years of his life under restraint, owing to the loss of his reason, and the stepbrother of the present Queen of Holland, namely, the last Prince of Orange, died so crazy that he insisted upon being entombed in the quilted silk petticoats which he had worn in life, owing to his invincible objection to the customary garments of his sex. The present Grand Duke of Baden was preceded on the throne by an entirely crazy brother, who was so demented that it was necessary to institute a Regency throughout his reign; and while Prince Maximilian of Baden, who, in view of the childlessness of the crown prince is the heir presumptive to the throne, is now in fairly good health, he has on more than one occasion been obliged to retire to a sanitarium on account of troubles which are described as "nervous."

These are but few, very few indeed, of the long list of bona fide lunatics of royalty. The names of many more could be cited. But those given here will be sufficient to demonstrate the truth of the assertion made at the outset of this article, namely, that royalty from the moment of its birth until the hour of its death, is confronted with the menace of the madhouse.

HOW TO BUY YOUR SMART SUMMER HAT FOR FIVE DOLLARS

If you have five dollars to spend on a spring hat, this row of pretty bonnets will give you some idea of the prevailing styles which you can get for that amount of money. Most of them show the bell-shape, so popular just at present, and which is just as becoming to a child of ten as it is to a woman of fifty. It really is a blessing to get a shape that shades the face, or at least the eyes, and yet shows no unbecoming rigidity of line or the equally unattractive Flora McFlimsy droop of the unwired hat.

These new shapes are made up in different colored straw—red, blue, brown and tan, but the natural colored straw is the vogue this year. It is a color between tan and a golden brown. These five-dollar hats are trimmed either with flowers and velvet ribbon or with satin and sheaf aigrettes.

The first one is of natural colored straw with a wreath of red roses at the back and a bow of red in front. The next hat is of green straw, with a velvet edge of dark blue, and quills of blue and green. The third hat is in different shades of brown, with brown quills. The fourth is of light yellow straw with a high poke crown and trimmings of roses and black velvet. The fifth is also of light straw with a bunch of ox-eyed daisies and a large bow of ribbon at the back. The sixth is wine-colored straw, the crown run through with ribbon and finished off with two bird wings at the side. The seventh is more elaborate, a shape where most of the brim is at the back of the hat, this being one of the season's fancies, though even the milliners can't tell exactly why they expose the face to the sun and shade the back of the hair. Perhaps the many artificial curls call for protection. However, this fashion is quaint and becoming to a great many women. This particular hat has a trimming of black satin, with a sheaf aigrette and roses. The last hat is essentially spring-like, or even summery, being of white straw with very pale yellow roses and white ribbon.

EMULATION: Arms and Poses

GLOVES AND HOSE FOR THE BEST PICTURES

Reader, are you a candidate for victor in the comparison of arms—rivalry instituted by THE TRIBUNE to elicit the identity of that feminine resident of Alameda county who has the most enchanting arms, in shape and artful loveliness. If you have not enlisted as a volunteer in this exposition you should do so promptly, unless you are convinced that your arms are really lacking in beauty of taper, or that it is impossible for you to assume a position before the camera that will result in a likeness that shall evince grace and actress-like no-nachance.

It is required that arms be bared to shoulder in the photographs put in competition for the first prize—one dozen pairs of silk hosiery (to cost $60), and the question for ablest and prettiest pose is to be a box of very desirable gloves. If you lack a picture of yourself that is suitable, then write for a free Shaw & Shaw photo order to "Phidias, editorial department, OAKLAND TRIBUNE."

Views of a large number of contestants have been given heretofore; some remarkably good portraits are still awaiting their turn to appear in these columns, and a hundred or so of orders are out and not yet filed at the photo-studio—holders thereof should utilize same without further delay. However, more new recruits are welcome, for the quest for the absolutely grandest and most exquisite arm ought to exhaust the resources of Alameda county.

"I am a young mother," writes a Berkeley resident, dwelling on Dwight way, "and I have the cutest little baby. Shall I be photoed holding my little one in my lap?" Phidias will respond: "Yes. Some of the great historical pictures have for principal subjects a mother and child."

SENTENCES MAN TO BATH FOR MONTH

PHILADELPHIA, April 22.—In undisputed worst-case of the century, a prisoner before him in the Twenty-eighth District stationhouse a few mornings ago. An inmate area of four feet of oak deck and one foot of oak railing separated the two, but, notwithstanding this, after some scrutiny of the man the magistrate moved back as far as the wall would let him, and said:

"Would you mind telling men when you had a bath last?"

"I guess it was last summer," remarked Tony, manifestly a little in doubt.

"When did you wash your face last?"

"Oh, if you mean that," responded the prisoner reassuringly, "it was six weeks ago."

"When did you wash your hands?"

"Oh, you're kidding, judge. I didn't keep 'em track!"

But Magistrate Rau didn't smile. He frowned slightly and spoke the sentence: "To the correction with you! And I guess you'll remember about being washed, for I'm going to instruct them to bathe you once a day for thirty days. Out with him!"

In the stationhouse Tony was offered a basin of hot water, soap and a towel, and was coaxed to bathe, but he balked.

ALLEGED WATCH TRUST IS UNDER BAN OF OFFICIALS

Big Manufacturers Claim That Elgin and Waltham Companies Are in Combine.

WASHINGTON, April 22.—The Department of Justice has been hot after what is called the watch trust ever since a number of important watch manufacturers, with headquarters and business in Ohio and Pennsylvania, called on President Roosevelt a month ago and declared that the alleged watch trust was operating in restraint of trade and handicapping competition.

The department has been spending a goodly portion of the half million appropriation, put at its disposal a year or so ago, in sending out special agents to investigate the watch business and to find out how much there is in the complaint of the important watch manufacturers. The testimony and facts are to be laid before Attorney-General Bonaparte within a short time and the question of proceeding under the Sherman anti-trust act will be determined by that official.

CONTROL TRUST.

According to the complaints put before the President and the Department of Justice by the important watch manufacturers, the alleged watch trust is made up of the Waltham and Elgin companies, which produce 50 per cent of the watches in this country. The independents charge that there is a combine between the two companies, by which watch movements of an intermediate grade are sold at the same price all over the country, no matter whether a Waltham or an Elgin. It is likewise asserted that these two companies do not allow their movements to go into any other make of case than those manufactured by the Keystone Company of Philadelphia. In this way

WITCHES.

Neglected by the powers, witches ceased to be so notorious, but the belief continued to exist, and does exist now, in rural parts of Scotland and England; and in England and France, even in the towns, fortune-tellers, whether they charge a guinea or a shilling for their advice, are witches under the terms of the old statutes and flourish abundantly, but as they are not burned they are supposed by superficial observers to have been exterminated by school boards and electric lightening. The blacker sort of witch who "overlooks" and casts spells on man and beast may be found in many rural regions north and south. One of them was brought before a squire and J. P. of my acquaintance as a dangerous nuisance. He said to her, solemnly: "You know, Betty, the Bible says 'Thou shalt not suffer a witch to live in the parish,'" and she migrated under certain conditions of compensation, to another parish. Andrew Lang in the London Post.

Important companies are prevented from putting Waltham and Elgin watches in cases of their own make and cannot purchase them except with an agreement to use the Keystone cases.

NO EVIDENCE.

On excellent authority it is learned that the investigations of the department show that the charges are practically true. Despite the acquisition of the information, however, the department is said to have been unable to get any testimony or facts showing that there is an agreement between the two companies or that they own stock in the concerns of each other. The companies claim that it is true that they place their watches in the hands of the same agents in large cities, but that this is a mere coincidence, and they also admit that they prohibit their watches going into other than Keystone cases, it is said, and claimed that they have a right to do this, as their patents are their own property. The department hopes to acquire further information that will strengthen its case, which has some strong points against the alleged trust.

CLIFTON PARK IS PARADISE

Grubb Real Estate Company Opens Up New Tract in Fruitvale.

Clifton Park, well named the new subdivision of the uplands, is the new subdivision recently opened by the Grubb Real Estate Company, of 1238 Fruitvale avenue, Fruitvale, and which is being sold in one-fourth acre lots on the installment plan.

As this is such a choice location and the number of lots is so limited, the tract should be sold out in a short time.

It is situated north of the New Seaside Boulevard, within one block of the new Key Route extension, adjoining Mills College and near a rapidly building up residence section of fine homes.

S. S. Austin, the reliable and most favorably known real estate agent hereabouts, whose office is located on Twenty-third avenue, says the beautiful Boulevard Park property, which was subdivided into good-sized lots, is moving well, and as soon as the electric line, for which the franchise has already been granted, is extended to the property, the whole section will be disposed of in a very brief period.

This is about the choicest piece of land that has been on the market for a long time, the scenery being grand, the climate superb and the improvements complete and up to date.

Mr. Austin has opened a branch office on the tract for the convenience of those who come out that way. He also reports a number of sales of residence property, both in Fruitvale and East Oakland, and speaks in a convincing manner of his confidence in the future growth of that part of the city and adjoining suburbs.

PRESIDENT IS DENOUNCED

Resolutions Adopted by Labor Council Condemning Roosevelt's Criticism of Moyer and Haywood.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 22.—The Labor Council, at its meeting Friday night, by unanimous vote adopted the following resolutions condemning the attitude of President Roosevelt in the charges against Moyer and Haywood, officials of the Western Federation of Miners, accused of complicity in the assassination of former Governor Steunenberg of Idaho:

"Whereas, It is universally acknowledged in civilized communities that a man charged with a capital crime, and whose life is in the balance, should receive an impartial trial, to the end that his guilt or innocence may be determined; and

"Whereas, The repeated expression of President Roosevelt that Moyer and Haywood are 'undesirable citizens' is likely to prejudice men's minds, especially as the two men are alleged to have conspired to commit a brutal murder and are to be tried for their lives in a State other than the one in which they have legal residence—having been deported without due process of law—and in which public opinion is strongly divided on the issue; therefore be it

NOT SQUARE DEAL.

"Resolved, by the San Francisco Labor Council, That we hereby protest against the reiteration of President Roosevelt's opinion at this time as an injustice and contrary to the spirit of the 'square deal'; that we express our abhorrence of the crime perpetrated and a desire to see the perpetrators punished as they deserve, while at the same time we believe that men who claim to be innocent should have every protection afforded by legitimate and legal means; and be it further

"Resolved, That we express deep regret at the newly added department to American jurisprudence, which may be termed government by the President's opinion, and that the principles cherished in this land, and, at heart, the opinion of one man, who, after all, is like the rest of humanity, liable to err; and be it further

"Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be forwarded to President Roosevelt and the press."

The resolutions were introduced by Delegate Will J. French, of Typographical Union No. 21.

SUMMER FLOWERS.

Now that hundreds of women are putting out flower boxes and planning attractive window boxes, and planting plants, one society woman, with an artistic bent of mind, has seized upon the idea of using seven sabots which she picked up in Holland last summer. Seven gilded wooden shoes, ranging from the size worn by children to that of a six-foot man, were put in windows of her home. In the tiny child's sabot was planted a pansy stock, while in the larger shoes were geraniums—a delightful and artistic way of setting out plants for the summer. The scheme promises to take.

DECORATIONS FROM ITALY.

A large mural decoration representing the ruins of a Greek theater at Paestum, by Edward Gay, was shown at the public library, Mount Vernon, N. Y., recently. The canvas will decorate the interior of the dome of the Carnegie public library at Mount Vernon.

It was painted by Mr. Gay during his sojourn in Italy and Greece last spring. This old Greek theater, it is said, was excavated during the Roman period. The solid rock and ruins of the principal theater overlooking the sea still remain, and these the artist has used as a subject for his picture. The Grecian colonnade of the wall of Roman brick that overlooks the sea constitute the principal features in the foreground of the painting, while in the distance snow-capped Mount Aetna may be seen.

TEA LEAVES.

The accomplishment of reading fortunes and prophesying by tea leaves is becoming more general among all classes of women. Among those of the cult such an article as a tea strainer is not allowed to interfere with the free passage of leaves from the spout when the beverage is poured. Tea leaf diviners sit for hours at the table dissecting their friends and enemies. In all probability this kind of divining came down from Joseph, who read all sorts of things in his cup, even to the interpretation of dreams.—New-York Press.

BIRTHDAY OF GENERAL GRANT

Commemorative Exercises Are Held in Illinois Town.

GALENA, Ill., April 22.—The birthday of General Grant was celebrated today for the seventeenth time. This morning the cornerstone of the Carnegie-Foy $50,000 library building was laid. The commemorative exercises took place this afternoon in Grant Park. The orator of the day was Senator A. J. Beveridge of Indiana.

Senator Beveridge said that it was fitting at a celebration of the birthday of General Grant, the meaning of whose life work was the ever-increasing unity of the American people into an ever-stronger growing nation, to discuss the question of States' rights.

"The time must come," he said, "when States must reduce their interference with national highways passing through them, or better still, stop interference altogether. That time will be delayed because of selfish interests, because of the presence of States' rights with which we are now troubled, but chiefly by demagogues who seek position and power by attacking those most conspicuous of public corporations. The American people are as much in danger from the demagogues who selfishly and ignorantly seek to inflame their passions as they are from the selfish interests who seek to exploit their resources."

The senator discussed the dangers of over-centralization and pointed out the necessity of compulsory publicity in corporate affairs and the national incorporation of great enterprises.

In closing the senator paid a tribute to President Roosevelt.

COLUMBUS AND DOG-FACED MEN.

He also understood that far away, there was a man with one eye, and others with dog's noses who were cannibals and that when they captured an enemy they beheaded him and drank his blood.—Journal of Columbus First Voyage.

FEAR UPRISING AMONG NATIVES

People of India Demand Control of Government Through Parliament.

LAHORE, British India, April 22.—The publication of inflammatory articles in the native papers inciting race hatred against the Europeans and demanding native control of the government of India by means of an elected parliament, has been followed recently by riots in Lahore, and elsewhere in the Punjab and by attacks upon Europeans.

Professional and political agitators are now fomenting strikes on the railroads and the government has concluded that it is time to suppress the rioting by forceful means, if necessary. The authorities are satisfied that a determined front will speedily end the outward signs of dissatisfaction, especially as they have the unanimous support of the great Mohammedan population, who at numerous mass meetings have emphatically condemned the anti-European movement. Recent events have given a remarkable impulse to enlistment in the volunteers.

"JUS' BLUFFIN'" COSTS MAN NEAT SUM

NEW YORK CITY, April 22.—"I tried to arrest this man when he was following his wife with a revolver. He turned the revolver on me and said he would shoot me. So I shot at him and brought him down here." This was the testimony of Kallel Zennar, a paragon against Fred Brown, a negro in the Police Court recently.

"Jus' bluffin'. That's all. Jus' bluffin'," said Brown.

"Well, that's a mighty bad way to go about it," the judge said. "It's a bad policy to try such things on policemen. Twenty-five dollars."

STOCK MARKET IS INACTIVE

Unsatisfactory Condition of Spring Crops Causes Falling Off of Trades.

NEW YORK, April 27.—The stock market has been narrow and professional under the restraint of the various factors of uncertainty in the outlook. One of the most important of these is the unsatisfactory condition of the winter wheat crop and the fears for delay for the other crops owing to the backward spring. Money rates have declined in all money centers. The rise in foreign exchange, however, has given rise to discussion of a possible early outflow of gold. The banking position in the interior as disclosed by the reports of March 22 to the Controller of Currency has been a subject of unfavorable comment. The importance attached to isolated incidents bearing on the future of industrial activity and on the probable course of the government's policy towards corporations indicates sensitiveness on those subjects.

He has been near the end for several days.

JUDGE KISSES HIS HORSE

SAN FRANCISCO, April 27.—With no apparent bitter recollection of yesterday's frenzied failure to get a warrant for the arrest of Francis J. Heney, Judge Hubbard appeared early this morning at the Temple Israel, smiling complacently and humming happily to himself. He held no court, but spent a few moments, pen in hand, after which he ordered his saddle horse brought around. Just before he mounted the animal he kissed it tenderly and clung to its nose.

CAPTAIN JONES IS GIVEN A VACATION

CLEVELAND, April 27.—Captain Jones of the Chicago American League team received notice of his indefinite suspension from President Ben Johnson here today. The action was taken as a result of trouble between Captain Stafford and Jones at yesterday's game upon the local grounds.
